Russians Gain In Caucasus; Press Predicts 'Big Events' Soon

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), May 1.—Russian troops once more on the move in the northwestern Caucasus were reported by Moscow early today to have captured "several key enemy positions" in a plane-supported drive which the Germans said was another big Red Army offensive in which 150,000 men were attacking.

"Soviet aircraft supported the operation of land units and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy," added the midnight communique recorded by the Soviet monitor. "Our assault (Stormovik) planes destroyed several dozen guns and over a battalion of German infantry."

Although the Russian bulletin gave few details of the fighting, Moscow dispatches said that the Russian capital was astir with expectation of great military developments.

Nazis Reported Drive

Two days ago the Germans reported that a large-scale Russian drive was under way in an effort to eject Axis troops from their last major foothold in the area around the Black Sea port of Novorossisk and the Kuban River valley in the Taman Peninsula to the north.

Russian reticence is customary whenever big operations are beginning, but the Moscow radio announced yesterday that Soviet airmen fighting over the Caucasus had shot down 116 German planes in two days, and the latest bulletin also told of the sinking by the Red navy of a German transport in the Black Sea.

The naval action apparently occurred off the German-held port of Novorossisk, which the Russians need for future operations aimed at the Crimea opposite the Caucasus.

Russian troops by German admission last were reported intrenched in the hills overlooking Novorossisk. The Russians also had fought their way along the Taman Peninsula to the north to a point 25 miles from German-held Temryuk on the Sea of Azov.

The midnight communique re-

Casualties Mount

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, April 30.—Axis defensive smashes reached the proportions of a counter-offensive today as enemy tanks and infantry were flung against recently captured Allied positions all along the front.

The fighting rose to the bloodiest pitch since the British, Americans and French began their all-front drive.

Before the strongest of all Axis counterattacks—against the Djebel Bou Aoukaz overlooking the open plain leading down to Tunis—the British First Army was beating back strongly from generally maintained positions.

To the north the Americans made slight gains, although forced to fight off unending counterthrusts.

British Convoy Off Gibraltar, Nazis Report

By the Associated Press

The Berlin radio in a dispatch datelined La Linea, Spain, said yesterday that about 150 British landing boats strongly protected by destroyers and an aircraft carrier passed through the Strait of Gibraltar toward the east in the most recent of alleged haval movements it said foreshadowed major action in the Mediterranean.

There was no confirmation of the report, recorded by the Associated Press. Similar reports have been issued from time to time by Axis propaganda agencies apparently in an effort to gain information.

The Berlin radio report added: "Unusually lively air and shipping traffic has been noticed at Gibraltar for several days. All types of planes are constantly arriving and departing.

"A convoy of 23 transports and tankers protected by several destroyers and patrol boats left Gibraltar Thursday. Soon after, also, the British battleships Rodney, Malaya and Renown (the latter actually a battle cruiser), as well as the aircraft carriers Furious, Illustrious and Argus, four cruisers and a flotilla of eight destroyers left Gibraltar.

"Spanish observers are convinced that major action in the Mediterranean is imminent."

Echoes Pledge Axis Must Yield Unconditionally In May Day Order

By James F. King
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Saturday), May 1.—Premier Josef Stalin in a May Day order of the day declared that shattering air blows by the Americans and British in the west foreshadowed the opening of a second front in Europe, and he ridiculed any Hitler peace talk.

He ruled out compromise by reiterating the words of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill in calling for the "unconditional surrender of Hitlerite Germany."

"It is now clear that only the utter routing of the Hitlerite armies and the unconditional surrender of Hitlerite Germany can bring peace to Europe," said Stalin's order, which was broadcast by the Moscow radio and recorded by the Soviet monitor here.

He praised the Allied air blows against Germany and Italy in the west, and the Allied ground gains in Africa, and said those factors combined with the Red army's winter successes had placed Germany in a critical position.

"It is clear that it is not because things are going well with us that the Germans are babbling about peace," he said.

"The babble about peace in Fascist camps indicates only that they are going through a great crisis."

Cites Fascist Crimes

"But of what kind of peace can one talk with the imperialist bandits from the German Fascist camp who have drowned Europe in blood and studded it with gallows.

"It is now clear that only the utter routing of the Hitlerite armies, and the unconditional surrender of Hitlerite Germany can bring peace to Europe."

The leader of all the Russias told his army and people that combined Allied operations which foreshadow "the formation of a second front in Europe" already had "shaken the Hitlerite war machine to its foundation," and had changed the course of the war.

The Germans and Italians, he said, are "facing catastrophe," but he warned that the final road to victory would not be easy. "They have not been smashed as yet," he said, and then added:

"Another two or three powerful blows from the West and East are needed, such as that dealt to the Hitlerite army in the past five or six months, for the catastrophe of Hitlerite Germany to become an accomplished fact."

Crucial Events Traced

The events leading up to the Axis "crisis" were traced by Stalin in his message.

At Stalingrad where the great Soviet offensive of the last winter began, he said the Red army had "liquidated" two Axis armies and had captured more than 300,000 prisoners.

Meanwhile in Africa he said, the "victorious troops of our Allies," the United States and Britain, began sweeping the Germans and Italians out of Africa and simul-

Army to Ask 59 Billion for Fiscal Year

To Provide Force Of 7,600,000; House Hearings Slated May 10

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A War Department appropriation of at least 59 billion dollars, providing for an average Army of 7,600,000 men and all probable military contingencies through the spring and early summer of 1944, will be asked of Congress, probably within the next 10 days.

The new Army bill will break all war and peacetime records for any single appropriation, exceeding the current year's Army measure by more than 17 billion dollars and running over the President's January budget estimates for the War Department's military by more than six billion dollars.

Indicated by Rep. Snyder

This was indicated yesterday by Representative J. Buell Snyder (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House War Appropriations subcommittee. Snyder booked subcommittee hearings on the big bill starting May 10.

"The bill will provide not only for all foreseen contingencies but for other developments that are still in the realm of mere possibility," Snyder told The Post. "Whether we decide or do not decide to invade Europe within the next fiscal year, adequate provision will be made."

The veteran House spokesman on Army funds said it is possible the record 1944 war bill will exceed 59 billion dollars if some unexpected development requires an increase in estimates.

Foresaw 5-Year War

Snyder, who last year urged preparation for a five-year war, said he knew of "no sign or evidence that we should not continue to prepare in a bigger way than ever for at least four more years of war. We can only trust it will be shorter."

On the basis of estimates, not yet submitted to Congress, it was indicated that between 16 and 18 billion dollars of the proposed outlay would be for aviation alone. Approximately half of the over-all total of the bill would be needed for maintenance and equipment of the ever-expanding Army, Snyder estimated.

Practically every item in the unprecedented $42,820,000,000 appropriation voted last year, including funds for tanks, armored cars, antitank guns, antiaircraft guns

Lewis Blames Coal Operators; No Union Order To Strike Issued

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

A Nation-wide coal strike to secure approval for higher wages in spite of Government wage controls began last midnight in defiance of a presidential ultimatum.

The stoppage—biggest to occur in this war—engulfed more than 600,000 workers in both the bituminous and anthracite coal fields. The number included striking members of the United Mine Workers and their supervisors who were thus made idle.

The Presidential ultimatum— issued to U. M. W. Chief John L. Lewis—had warned sternly that the President would invoke his war powers to break the strike if the stoppage were not at an end by 10 a. m. today.

As of midnight, no official strike call had gone out from the U. M. W., but officials emphasized that none was necessary, since historically the miners do not dig coal without a collective bargaining contract. Collective bargaining contracts covering the entire industry expired at midnight, although technically the War Labor Board had ordered them extended indefinitely.

Meanwhile, the White House was reported at work on a second telegram to Lewis which would bluntly order him to reveal whether he intends to yield to the ultimatum deadline.

Various courses of action were open to the President in the event of continued defiance, ranging from an appeal over Lewis' head to the miners to an outright declaration of martial law, accompanied by use of troops.

Replies to President

Lewis had replied to the presidential appeal without revealing his plans but declaring:

"We want an agreement. We want to work. The bituminous coal operators have wilfully blocked the making of an agreement. We respectfully advise that in our judgment, the making of an agreement through a renewal of collective bargaining is the logical means of providing justice and equity to all parties."

Lewis declined to comment to reporters in New York, but it was revealed that he planned to stay in New York, rather than go into the coal fields and set up strike headquarters as was rumored earlier.

Text of Brown's Address On 'Tough' Price Policy

The text of the address last night by Price Administrator Brown follows:

YOUR Government needs your support in this crisis in the coal fields—a crisis which if not averted will reach the battlefields. The argument of those who would break the industrial peace and junk the "No Strike" agreement is that increases in the cost of living have run beyond increases in wages. This, my fellow Americans, is not so.

Wages in industry, factory and mine have risen more since the outbreak of war in 1939, than have either the general cost of living or the cost of food. Tonight I propose to show these facts.

Stabilization is not easy. It is not easy for people to live with. It is not easy for Government. The Government can do the job only if the people—all the people—are willing not only to accept stabilization but to support it; only if everyone is ready not only to support the stabilization of the other fellow's price or wage but to accept stabilization of his own price or his own wage.

A year of experience has shown us that increases in the cost of living beget increases in wages and that wage increases in their turn beget increases in the cost of living. It has shown us that we cannot hold the line anywhere unless we hold it everywhere.

A month ago I wrote leaders of the Congress to oppose the Pace bill which would have substantially increased farm prices. I did this not because I was unmindful of the claims which the farmer has upon the Nation.

Acts to Halt Price and Wage Race

I did it because an increase in farm prices would have touched off a race between wages and the cost of living, and because of my profound conviction that farmers, like workers and all the rest of us, have nothing to gain from such a race and must, indeed, lose everything. The Pace bill did not pass.

Today we are faced by a crisis on the wage front. Demands are now being made for substantial wage increases. I am compelled to speak in opposition, just as a month ago I spoke up in opposition to the proposed rise in farm prices.

I am compelled to point out that if this wage increase is granted, increases cannot be denied to workers in other industries and increased prices cannot be denied to farmers. These increases in wages and in farm prices can only mean further rise in the cost of living. What will it profit workers to have more dollars in their pay envelopes if it takes all these extra dollars, and perhaps more, to feed and clothe their families?

I RECOGNIZE how strong are the claims of the coal miners. Theirs is hard and dangerous work and it is work without which the wheels of industry must falter and stop. But I cannot say too strongly that the coal miners cannot better their position in a race between wages and the cost of living. Now for the facts.

Coal miners are earning today far more than they earned at the time war broke out. Average hourly earnings in the bituminous mines in January of this year were 22 per cent above the average for August, 1939. This does not measure the full improvement, however. Where three years ago thousands of miners were working one or two days a week, with frequent layoffs, today they are working full time.

Their weekly pay envelopes show the difference. Average weekly earnings in January of this year were 53 per cent greater than in August, 1939. I cite these figures, not because I begrudge the miners their gains, but only to show that they have shared with most of the rest of us in the economic improvement of the past 3 years.

He Sees Miners' Side of Story

There is, to be sure, another side to the story. These gains have not been wholly real. Rising prices have eaten into this increase of earnings. Nonetheless, they have not eaten it away altogether. During the period in which weekly wages rose 53 per cent, the cost of living increased 22 per cent. Therefore, despite the rise in the cost of living, the weekly wages of the miner will buy 25 per cent more goods today than in the summer of 1939.

It must be admitted that the prices paid by miners for food and clothing have undoubtedly risen more than is shown in the official figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. As we all know, there are chiselers and black market operators who are profiting from the Nation's need, who are charging, not the ceiling prices we have established, but what the traffic will bear. It is doubly bitter for those who honestly abide by the rules of the game to pay tribute to these who do not. How serious this black market is, no one knows.

A CAREFUL study made by a great labor union in New Jersey shows a 10 to 12 per cent higher cost than does the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The true figure is probably somewhere between the two. But accepting for the purpose of argument the full price stated by the union, wages in industry on a 1939 base outstrip the claimed rise in the cost of living. Even if we confine our inquiry to food costs alone which we were legally unable to hold until the Stabilization Act was passed, wages have risen more than the cost of living, as examined by the New Jersey C. I. O. Our purpose in the law was not to change but to hold the level, to stabilize.

In the year just past the Office of Price Administration was confronted with the enormous task of moving swiftly to contro. millions of prices. It is understandable that mistakes were made, that the performance fell short of perfection. Nonetheless, the rise of prices has been reasonably well stabilized. What is more important, the tools of control have been forged. Finally experience in their use has provided the "know-how" we must have to do the job. Today we can do the job and we shall do the job.

4-Point Control Program Drawn

I have drawn up a four-point program to control and in many instances to roll back the cost of living and then to hold it. I have instructed my staff to put this program into effect without delay to the limit of our powers. These points are:

First, to extend price control across the board, to every important commodity.

Second, to roll back those prices which have got out of hand. The prices of meats, fresh and canned vegetables, coffee, among others, will be rolled back.

Third, to establish specific dollars-and-cents prices for foods, so that all may know—sellers and buyers alike—what the legal price is. These prices will be printed in small booklets which the housewife can put in her handbag when she goes to market, and will be otherwise displayed.

Fourth, to bring the chiseler, the racketeer, the black market operator to justice. These parasites feed not only upon the consumer but upon the overwhelming majority of businessmen, who are eager to abide by the law and our regulations under the law.

I PROPOSE with your help to enforce these ceiling prices and to exterminate these criminal operators of the illegitimate markets. The main responsibility for control of the black market is with you, the American people. In a short time you will know the legal price for practically all food you buy. If you pay a higher price you are a law violator. If you are charged a higher price the seller is a law violator.

I do not think the United States Army could enforce price control completely without the active cooperation of the American people. You can enforce it if you refuse to pay the price above those established by law. The claimed justification for this strike would fade entirely if every American coal miner and housewife would make and keep this simple pledge. "I will not pay one cent above the legal price."

We in the Office of Price Administration are charged with the responsibility of fixing prices.

We are keeping the value in the American dollar. We are the pro-

Backward, Turn Backward

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown last night gave his answer to demands for higher wages from John L. Lewis and other labor leaders—a promise to slash food prices which have gotten out of hand and to launch a vigorous enforcement drive against price "chiselers" and the "black market."

Acknowledging the existence of a "crisis on the wage front," Brown outlined a new 4-point price program in a Nation-wide radio broadcast and branded as "not so," the contention that "increases in the cost of living have run beyond increases in wages."

Speaking but a few hours before the midnight "zero hour" for a Nation-wide coal strike, Brown said he was "compelled to speak in opposition" to Lewis' demands, "just as a month ago, I spoke up in opposition to the proposed rise in farm prices."

"I am compelled to point out," Brown said, "that if this wage increase is granted, increases cannot be denied to workers in other industries and increased prices cannot be denied to farmers. These increases in wages and in farm prices can only mean further rise in the cost of living."

The four-point program, as outlined by Brown:

"FIRST, to extend price control 'across the board' to every important commodity.

"SECOND, to roll back those prices which have got out of hand. The prices of meats, fresh and canned vegetables, and coffee, among others, will be rolled back.

"THIRD, to establish specific dollars and cents prices for foods, so that all may know—sellers and buyers alike—what the legal price is. These prices will be printed in small booklets which the housewife can put in her handbag when she goes to market, and will be otherwise displayed.

"FOURTH," to bring the chiseler, racketeer, the black market operator to justice. These parasites feed not only upon the consumer but upon the overwhelming majority of businessmen, who are eager to abide by the law, and our regulations under the law. I propose, with your help, to enforce these ceiling prices and to exterminate these criminal operators of the illegitimate market."

The American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and the railroad brotherhoods, in a joint statement made Thursday through the Office of Price Administration's labor advisory committee, charged that the Administration was pursuing a "two-faced" economic control policy, placing wages under rigid control but allowing prices to rise. Brown's statement, made in a 15-minute radio address, was viewed as the official answer to this protest as well as part of the Administration's present efforts to cope with Lewis.

"Stabilization is not easy," Brown said. "It is not easy for people to live with. It is not easy for Government. The Government can do the job only if the people—all the people—are willing not only to accept stabilization but to support it; only if everyone is ready not only to support the stabilization of the other fellow's price or wage but to accept stabilization of his own price or of his own wage."

He pointed out that a month ago he opposed the Pace bill to include labor costs in farm parity prices "because an increase in farm prices would have touched off a race between wage and the cost of living and because of my profound con-

Britain, Canada Take Charge Of Convoys From North Ports

By International News Service

Ottawa, April 30.—Canada and Great Britain tonight announced they have jointly assumed charge of all trade convoys from northwestern Atlantic ports to the United Kingdom and will provide an unprecedented "aerial umbrella" for every mile of the route.

Part of a concerted move by the United States, Britain and Canada to consolidate and augment anti-submarine operations in the North Atlantic, the new setup will operate under a newly designated "commander in chief, Canadian Northwest Atlantic."

Rear Admiral L. W. Murray of the Royal Canadian Navy, Canada's commanding officer on the Atlantic since September, 1942, has been selected to fill the new post, which is an outgrowth of the recent conference at Washington attended by British, Canadian and American naval and air officers.

New long-range Canadian bombers and American aircraft will patrol to "somewhere in mid-Atlantic," whence British bombers will take over in the new program for safeguarding shipping convoys over the north Atlantic route, an official announcement stated.

The announcement was made by Canada's minister of national defense for naval services, Angus MacDonald, and minister of national defense for air, C. G. Power. It specified that the United States retains strategic responsibility for

Mysterious Mrs. Smith Pays $500 Rent on R Street House

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

The big red house on R Street rents for $500 a month, it was learned yesterday.

This rental for the big four-story Georgian mansion at 2101 R Street Northwest, where a war contract seeker reported meeting Army and Navy officers over the dinner table, was formally fixed last August 5, after proceedings before the District Rent Control Office.

Robert F. Cogswell is District rent administrator.

Mrs. Eula Smith, who rents the house, and who has declined to tell a House investigating subcommittee what connection, if any, she had with war contract procurement, was not immediately available to comment on the rental.

Capitol sources reported yesterday that a number of Congressmen had been guests at the R Street house, and that the lists of dinner guests had included one Cabinet officer, besides the military officers earlier mentioned.

Meanwhile, Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said there was "no foundation" for the statement of Representative Morrison (Democrat) of Louisiana, who had told reporters he believed he had met John P. Monroe as the result of an introduction by McCormack.

McCormack, reached in Boston by the Associated Press, said he did not know anything about Monroe.

Morrison had voluntarily entered the mystery by saying that his congressional tags had decorated Monroe's automobile, and that he had borrowed the car for several days.

Mrs. Smith and Monroe, who also gave the investigating subcommittee no answers to its questions, are to be given another opportunity to talk before the full membership of the House Military Affairs Committee Wednesday. If they refuse, contempt proceedings may be started, according to Chair

U. S. Gets 10 Jap Planes, Loses None

Enemy Is Repulsed In Attack on Base Of 14th Air Force

By J. Reilly O'Sullivan
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the United States Army Air Force in China, April 28 (Delayed).—The Japanese, in an offensive apparently aimed at trying to drive the United States Air Forces out of China, lost 10 to 18 crashed and blazing planes shot down by P-40 Warhawk fighter pilots after a bombing raid today on an airbase of the Fourteenth United States Army Air Force.

Ten Zeros accompanying the bombers definitely were destroyed. Eight other planes probably were destroyed.

No United States planes were lost. The bomb damage to the airbase was negligible. Most bombs struck Chinese villages near the airfield, causing a number of civilian casualties. There were only a few casualties among the United States Army personnel.

The raiders were intercepted by nine P-40's about 150 miles south of the airbase while heading back toward Burma. The P-40's, with Lieut. Col. John Alison of Gainesville, Fla., in the lead, tore into a formation of 21 bombers protected by about 25 Zeros and the running fight lasted 20 minutes.

Burning Planes as Beacons

"Coming home we could navigate by the fires from the burning Jap planes on the ground," said Capt. John Hampshire of Grants Pass, Oreg., who shot down two Zeros confirmed and probably got two other Zeros and two bombers.

The quiet-spoken Hampshire, with 10 confirmed victories, 5 scored this month, is the leading ace in this theater.

"There were too many Zeros to work on the bombers long," said Hampshire.

Maj. Edmund Goss of Tampa, Fla., squadron commander, with five victories, said when he sighted the Japanese they "looked like a bunch of ducks flying—black specks in the clouds."

Jap Plane Loss 18 to 1

In the last three fights since April 1 Goss' squadron destroyed 18 enemy planes with the loss of only one U. S. plane.

The Japanese offensive started last Saturday when they attempted to raid an advance airfield in Hunan Province. Five Japanese planes were destroyed and four others probably were downed that day.

The bombing made shambles of Chinese villages and the civilian wounded filled the U. S. Army Hospital. Torn bodies were strewn on the streets. Many were women and children. Some were trapped in smashed and blazing houses.

Plea to Soldiers

Dutch Urged To Resist Nazi Roundup

By the Associated Press

London, April 30.—Four hundred thousand Dutch soldiers, ordered interned by German occupation authorities, were told by the Netherlands government in London today to resist the Nazi decree by making themselves "unfindable."

Swiss dispatches said the roundup of the disarmed Dutch forces already had started and that 18,500 had been arrested and sent to 14 concentration camps near the German border.

Over Radio Orange the government advised the men to hide if possible.

"Don't register," they were told. "Keep quiet. Disregard all orders and decrees. This is the advice the Netherlands government gives you. Disregard summonses. Try to make yourselves unfindable."

The German order was announced last night in a broadcast by the Berlin radio which said officers and men alike, who were interned after Holland capitulated to the Nazis in May, 1940, and later were released on Hitler's orders, had been commanded to report immediately for return to prison camps.

"There may be two reasons why the Germans took this measure," said the Netherlands government broadcast. "First, the general Netherlands resistance against the Germans. Second, Germany's shortage of labor and soldiers is becoming ever more critical."

The announcer made an appeal for joint action and collaboration in opposition to the German move, saying:

"Only mass resistance and mass refusal will be successful."

Japs Planning New Pacific Operations, Says Tokyo Radio

By the Associated Press

The Tokyo radio quoted Maj. Gen. Nakao Yahagi, chief of the army press section of imperial headquarters, as announcing in a Nagoya speech yesterday that Japan had completed establishment of strategic bases in the Southwest Pacific, "thus paving the way for contemplated new operations."

These bases were listed as on Timor Island and to the north, on New Guinea and in the Solomons, all north and northeast of Australia.

Australia, Yahagi said, is anticipating new operations by the Japanese and "is now in an extremely nervous condition."

The army press chief asserted the Japanese army had crushed enemy counteroffensives in all theaters of the war and the defense area under control of the Japanese army now included a circular area within a radius of 3100 miles of Japan.

Newly planned offensive operations, he said, would be carried out from bases within this gigantic circle.

ported action also on the north coast of the Sea of Azov west of Rostov where the Russians were stopped close to Taganrog in their winter offensive.

In this area 30 miles west of Rostov artillerymen were said to have dispersed and partly wiped out a company of German infantry.

Only scattered fighting was reported elsewhere along the big front.

German accounts of the Caucasian fight said all Soviet attacks had been repulsed, but again mentioned the numerical superiority of the Russians.

Yesterday's mid-day Soviet communique had been routine in tone, but the government newspaper Izvestia thus prepared the public for an imminent change in the course of the struggle:

"Not many days separate us from big events. This May we are at the threshold of a decisive stage of our sacred war of liberation."

Other press comment, all of which took a significantly expectant tone, was to the effect that the Nazis had no idea of the strength of Soviet reserves.

Against German reinforcements reported moving up in all sectors the Red air force was striking with enormous power and some of the greatest air battles of the war were developing.

It was declared here that Soviet fighter planes held clear superiority and were giving the Nazi air force such blows as it had not had since the Battle of Britain.

Stalin Bars Separate Peace

taneously the "valiant Anglo-American air force" struck "shattering blows at military and industrial centers of Germany and Italy, foreshadowing the formation of a second front in Europe."

"Thus," he added, "for the first time since the beginning of the war a blow at the enemy from the East dealt by the Red army merged with a blow from the West dealt by troops of our Allies into one joint blow.

"All these circumstances taken together have shaken the Hitlerite war machine to its foundation, have changed the course of the World War, and created the military prerequisite for victory over Hitlerite Germany."

"True," he added, "the enemy tries to disguise his critical situation by a clamor about total mobilization but no amount of clamor can eliminate the fact that the camp of the Fascists is really going through a grave crisis."

The German crisis, he said, was evident in a number of ways. First, he said, German boasts of "a lightning war" had yielded to boasts of how good they were in "avoiding another Stalingrad in one or another sector of the eastern or Tunisian fronts."

"Secondly," he continued, "the crisis in the Fascist camp finds expression in that the Fascists begin to speak more frequently about peace.

No Separate Peace

"To judge from the report of the foreign press the conclusion can be arrived at that the Germans would wish to obtain peace with Britain and the U. S. A. on the condition that these two draw away from the Soviet Union, or on the other hand they would wish to obtain peace with the Soviet Union on the condition that it (the Soviet Union) draws away from Britain and the U. S. A.

"Treacherous to the marrow themselves, the German imperialists have the nerve to apply their own yardstick to the Allies, expecting that one or the other of them will swallow the bait."

Stalin then echoed the call of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill for the "unconditional surrender of Hitlerite Germany."

The Russian army has grown in offensive power, Stalin said, but he warned that "it would be naive to think that the catastrophe (for Germany) will come of itself—drift in with the tide."

"For this reason," he said near the conclusion of his order, "the people of the Soviet Union and their Red army, as well as our allies and their armies, still face a stern and hard struggle for complete victory over the Hitlerite fiends."

"Comrades, Red army men and Red navy men, commanders and political workers, men and women guerillas, men and women workers, men and women peasants, peoples engaged in the intellectual professions, brothers and sisters temporarily under the yoke of German oppressors, on behalf of the Soviet government and the Bolshevik Parties I greet and congratulate you on the day of May first," the order said.

"The people of our country are meeting May Day in a stern patriotic war. They entrusted their fate to the Red army and were not mistaken in their hopes.

"Comrades, Red army men, Red navy men, commanders and political workers, men and women guerillas—while greeting and congratulating you on the occasion of the first of May, I order:

"One, that all Red army men, infantrymen, mortar gunners, artillerymen; tankmen, fliers, sappers and signalmen continue indefatigably to perfect their fighting mastery, execute precisely the order of commanders, requirements of army regulations and instructions, sacredly observe discipline and maintain organization and order.

"Two, that commanders of war services and commanders of combined arms become experts in leading troops, skillfully organize the interaction of all arms and direct them in battle.

"To study the enemy, to improve reconnaissance—the eyes and ears of the army—to remember that without this one cannot beat the enemy without miss.

"To raise the efficiency of the work of troops headquarters. To achieve that, headquarters of Red army unit and formations become exemplary organs of the direction of troops.

"To raise the work of Army rear establishments to the level of requirements presented by modern warfare, to bear firmly in mind that on the full and timely supply of troops with ammunition, equipment and provisions depends the outcome of combat operations.

"Three, that the whole Red army consolidate and develop the successes of winter battles, that it does not surrender to the enemy a single inch of our soil, that it be prepared for decisive battles with the German Fascist invaders, that in defense it display the stubbornness and staunchness inherent in soldiers of the Red army and in the offensive—resolution, interaction of troops, bold maneuvers in the field of action, crowned by the encirclement and annihilation of the enemy.

"Fourth, that men and women guerillas strike powerful blows at the enemy" rear establishment, communications, military stores, headquarters, factories, destroy the enemy's telegraph and telephone lines, that they draw a wide strata of Soviet population in the area captured by the enemy into the active liberation struggle and thus save Soviet citizens from being driven away to German slavery and from extermination by the Hitlerite beasts, that they take merciless revenge on the German invaders for the blood and tears of our wives, children, mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters, that they help by all means the Red army in its struggle with the base Hitlerite enslavers.

"Comrades, the enemy has already felt the weight of the shattering blows of our troops. The time is approaching when the Red army, together with the armies of our Allies, will break the backbone of the Fascist beast.

"Long live our glorious motherland!

"Long live our valiant Red army!

"Long live our valiant Red navy!

"Long live our gallant men and women guerillas!

"Death to the German invaders!"

the western Atlantic—including escort operations not related to British trade convoys and local Canadian traffic.

Canadian authorities explained that United States forces which have been taking part in North Atlantic antisubmarine warfare have, as is indicated by news from the Pacific, North Africa and other fronts, many other duties to perform. The 'Battle of the North Atlantic' therefore has become the responsibility of Canadian and British forces. However, United States escort vessels are to continue to assist the Canadian and British forces and the United States Army Air Force will continue to furnish certain material and crews."

It was pointed out that the most dangerous period for submarine attacks is an hour or so before dusk. Submarines some of which are so big and heavily armed that they are like destroyers, sometimes shadow a convoy for hours to attack in that danger period. As dusk approaches they keep closing in so they will not lose touch. If however, aircraft are about the effectiveness of submarines is curtailed.

Pending the second hearing in the committee's probe of war contract fees, Department of Justice officials disclosed that they are cooperating in the House investigation. H. Ralph Burton, committee counsel, would not comment on any aspect of the inquiry.

Chairman May similarly preserved a careful silence, although he admitted his investigators had turned up some additional information for possible presentation to the committee Wednesday.

Mrs. Smith, as gracious and uncommunicative as ever, said that she had again conferred with the counsel upon whose advice she declined to answer the House subcommittee's inquiries, and that he had advised her to continue her silence.

The counsel's identity was an equally close secret, as was the identity of the counsel who advised Monroe to decline answers to questions.

Axis Offensive Developing In Tunisia

itself. This was in the Sedjenane Valley.

Another French force, beating forward upon Bizerte along the Mediterranean coast, advanced 2½ miles to the Djerel Touro to a point 22 miles west of Bizerte. To the south French troops operating below Pont du Fahs captured the 1712-foot Djebel Dehhafla.

South of the Achkel sector, in the region above Sidi N'Sir, the Americans had broken forward substantially, compelling the enemy to withdraw on the Djebel Anntra to avoid being outflanked.

In the Jefna sector, roughly midway between the Achkel and Sidi N'Sir areas, some progress was reported in the mountainous terrain shielding Mateur through hundreds of German mines and booby-traps.

Artillery Breaks German Attack

The French forces along the lower end of the most active front broke, with artillery fire, a German counterattack about Pont du Fahs.

Farther south Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth Army gained its objective in a local attack at an unspecified point, but suffered a slight reverse before a German counterattack.

Dispatches from Associated Press Correspondent Harold V. Boyle on the front southwest of Mateur reported a continuation, at rising tempo, of American artillery fire today and told of attacks on Allied front line positions by 15 German planes, the largest seen in that area in several days.

The single exception to the slow, general American advance in the north was in an area 16 miles southwest of Mateur, where yesterday American infantrymen were pushed from two foothills near the Djebel Tahent—otherwise called Hill 609—at the end of desperate fighting in which they had no cover from enemy artillery fire beyond occasional small boulders.

While the weather again somewhat restricted Allied air activity, the air arm and light naval forces sank three Axis ships and damaged a dozen others. Air observation indicated that enemy vessels were loaded outbound as well as inbound, and it was assumed some Axis personnel was being taken out.

One of the heaviest Allied air attacks along the forward front was against Axis positions in the Medjerda Valley, and particularly on Djebel Bou Aoukaz in support of the British First Army, where more than 30 tons of demolition and fragmentation bombs were cast down.

Yesterday's aerial score was 14 Axis planes destroyed against 10 Allied craft lost.

New Cannon Process Boon To U. S. Output

By Jack Chester
Associated Press Staff Writer

Watertown, Mass., April 30.—The Watertown Arsenal, one of the Nation's biggest big-gun production centers, today revealed some details of a revolutionary process for the centrifugal casting of cannon barrels, without which officers said the Army now would be "sadly deficient in artillery."

Col. John Mather, commanding officer of the ordnance plant which spreads over approximately 100 close-packed acres, told 40 newsmen after an official inspection of the new gun casting method that "there simply were not enough ordinary forging facilities in the country to have met Army and Navy requirements."

Actual production figures were held a military secret, but Colonel Mather reported that the arsenal had had the centrifugal process "on a production basis" for the last two years.

The conducted tour of the arsenal showed huge piles of already-cast big-gun barrels stacked in the yards awaiting finishing and boring.

The casting process was spectacular. Moulten steel was poured amid a shower of whirling sparks into a hardened steel cast revolving at such a rate of speed that the red hot steel was spread layer on layer. The pouring and whirling continued until only a thin hollow, representing the center of gravity, was left. In half an hour a new gun barrel was ready to go on its way.

The big tubes are buried in sand to cool and later lifted six at a time by a huge crane which lowers them lengthwise into a furnace for hardening, then, red hot, into a cold water bath which sends up great bursts of steam, through another heating for tempering and finally an air cooling bath.

Watertown, which has been experimenting with centrifugal gun casting for 15 years, now has the only such plant in operation in the country for the casting of cannon tubes from 37 mm. to 105 mm. but another is nearing completion in Houston, Tex.

Hull Cuts Ties With Martinique, Calling Colony Tool of Vichy

By Kirke L. Simpson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Abrupt severance of informal American relations with Martinique, the only segment of the once vast French colonial empire not under the Axis heel yet still aloof from the war, was announced yesterday by Secretary of State Hull.

In a blistering note to the French high commissioner, Admiral Georges Robert, Hull said the United States would not continue to "recognize or negotiate with any French representative in the Antilles who remains subservient to or maintains contact with the Vichy regime" in France, which he denounced as "now an integral part of the Nazi system." He also terminated "any informal understanding with respect to th French Antilles based upon past discussions or conditions."

Secretary Knox said late in the day that the Navy is keeping watch on developments at Martinique but he declined to indicate what the next American move there might be.

The Government has not yet had any reply from Robert to Secretary of State Hull's letter notifying him of the abrogation, Knox said.

At a press conference, the Navy Secretary was asked whether the Navy is watching this Caribbean island.

"Oh, yes," he replied. "We've always had observation there, as you know. We have representatives right there in Martinique."

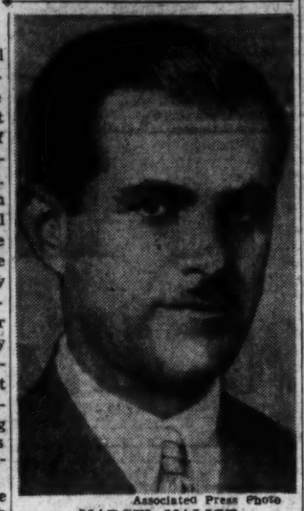

To an inquiry as to whether American warships are patrolling around the island, Knox replied in the negative, but explained that Martinique is in the midst of American defense bases in the Caribbean and that ships and planes are operating in that vicinity.

The Washington decision was implemented by recall of the American consul general assigned to Fort De France. A consular officer deft in charge, the Secretary informed the French commissioner, will be "restricted to the protection of American interests" at Martinique and nearby Guadeloupe and will "not be authorized to enter into or conduct any negotiations of a political character."

Given "Every Opportunity."

There was no official intimation as to what more drastic measures will follow, to eliminate Robert and bring the French Antilles into the war against the Axis. In making known the contents of his note to the French official, delivered to Robert April 26, Hull told a press conference every opportunity had been given the people and French authorities in Martinique to join the fight against the common enemy in mutually beneficial collaboration and cooperation. That hope, he added, had unfortunately not been realized in the six months since the informal relations with Admiral Robert were set up.

American action came in the wake of a recent exchange of letters between Admiral Robert and Joseph E. Dynan, Associated Press correspondent at San Juan, Puerto Rico, in which the French official set out certain conditions under which we might throw his lot in with French forces now fighting the Axis in French Africa and elsewhere. That those conditions were not satisfactory, either to Washington, or presumably to the French factions still seeking a basis of complete accord in the intercourse between the Generals Giraud and De Gaulle, is now obvious.

MARCEL MALIGE

Varied Stipulations

Among other stipulations in his answers to the Dynan letter of inquiry in mid-April, Admiral Robert said he could not be put in the position of "rebellion against the French government;" that the Allies must "permit" a fighting French unity "under one single authority vested with sovereign rights" instead of "constituting two factions, one dominated by Britain and the other by the American Government," and added that Allied treatment of "the French who believed that the moment had come to join the United Nations . . . only confirms me each day in my prudence."

The break in informal relations with Martinique opens the road for any other action Washington might desire to clear up the situation in the French Antilles. The Hull note is read, however, as not necessarily barring belated yielding by Admiral Robert to the already heavy pressure put upon him to rally to the United Nations standard.

Doubt remains that the Islands now are of sufficient strategic value in the warfare in the Atlantic to warrant the use of force to occupy them or to obtain possession of French warcraft virtually war-interned there since the collapse of Metropolitan France. Included are several craft that could be useful, like the aircraft carrier Bearn and two light cruisers.

Short of some further development, the break with Robert looks more like a final squeeze to force his hand or to incite the citizens of the French antilles into taking their destiny into their own custody than a preliminary step toward occupation of the islands by armed force.

Bomb Injures Laval, French Radio Reports

By the Associated Press

The Brazzaville radio of the Fighting French in equatorial Africa said last night in a broadcast reported to the Office of War Information by the United States Government's foreign broadcast intelligence service that Pierre Laval, French chief of government, was injured by a time-bomb while returning to Paris from a conference with Adolf Hitler.

The reported assassination attempt was not confirmed immediately by any source.

The Brazzaville report said a bomb exploded in the sleeping compartment occupied by Laval and his finance secretary, Pierre Cathala, and that Cathala has been wounded seriously. Laval, it was said, was wounded only slightly.

One of the first to collaborate with the Axis, Laval has been an assassin's target before. In August, 1941, he was shot and gravely wounded at Versailles. He recovered after being near death for several days.

The Berlin radio said Laval conferred with Hitler at the latter's headquarters Thursday and that "full understanding" was reached on "questions pending between Germany and Italy on one side and France on the other."

Raids on Jap Bases Called Just 'Warmup'

By Charles P. Arnot

American Correspondent with U. S. Forces in the Central Pacific.
(Distributed by the Associated Press.)

With a U. S. Army Aerial Task Force in the Central Pacific April 24 (Delayed).—Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale, commander of the Seventh Air Force, studied a map of the central Pacific combat zone today and promised that this week's heavy American bomber assaults on Japan's outlying bases of Nauru and Tarawa were merely a "warmup" for the forthcoming blows against the enemy strongholds guarding the main avenue to the Japanese Empire.

"It is no secret that these raids were the prelude of offensive action in the big central Pacific area," he declared as we sat in the headquarters of this advanced operational base.

"The attacks on Naupu and Tarawa themselves fulfilled the prediction made after the December raid on Wake Island that the enemy could expect to be hit harder and more often as our plans develop," General Hale said.

Longest Combined Mission

The daylight assault on phosphate-rich Naupu on April 21 and the moonlit raid on Tarawa 36 hours later represented the longest combined offensive mission by an American bomber force in any theater of war.

"The fact that our bombers were able to range out to such Japanese bases means we can reduce the defenses of such islands by air. Even now our bombers are laying the ground work for the future seizure of enemy bases to push back the Japanese outposts," the general added.

He said concentrated bombing would be followed by actual occupation of islands from which Japan proper and other island possessions could be reached. The general declined to discuss these plans in detail.

"Why tell the Japs when they are going to be hit? I can only say at this time that the blows are coming."

General Hale then disclosed that the forthcoming operations, like the recent raids, will be in the nature of guerilla-style aerial warfare: Striking the enemy suddenly where he least expects to be hit and then striking again.

Alternate Plans

"Right now we are building up to a campaign that will bring either repeated small raids or large concentrated attacks, whichever we consider more effective. Larger bombs, possibly two or four-ton blockbusters such as now are used in Europe, may be pressed into service later against appropriate targets."

General Hale recalled the recent statement of Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander in chief of United States Air Forces, who declared the bombers now in use have much less bomb capacity and flight range than those soon to be put in service.

The big Liberators which were used successfully in the Nauru and Tarawa operations already are improved in range, defensive armament and bomb-sight equipment. For the long Pacific missions Liberators are rapidly replacing Flying Fortresses because of their greater range and bomb capacity.

General Hale pointed out that such raids as those on Nauru and Tarawa demonstrated that American aerial units operating in force can hit the Japanese more often and harder than the enemy can strike back. At the same time the bomber crews are gaining valuable experience for larger operations.

"Raids such as these," he said, "will compel the Japs to spread their forces over a wider area and they are having a hard enough time now defending what they hold."

Hale described the Tarawa raid as the most perfect piece of navigation in his recollection.

"Notwithstanding their brief experience, our navigators have conducted the longest bombing flights of the war against pinpoint targets," he said. "The return of every bomber crew and the damage inflicted on the enemy together emphasize the feasibility of such operations."

The 50-year-old general personally led both raids. He took command of the Seventh Air Force when Maj. Gen. Clarence L. Tinker was lost during a raid on Wake last June.

600,000 Miners Standing Idle As Coal Contracts Expire

production, the coal situation shaped up as follows last night:

1. An Associated Press check of coal regions showed that 100,400 soft coal miners were on strike yesterday in Alabama, West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, with Tennessee unreported.

2. The War Labor Board ordered coal production continued without interruption in the anthracite fields after Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins certified the hard coal dispute to the board. Operators and miners meeting in New York were unable to reach an agreement to extend existing contracts, but made arrangements to permit maintenance workers to stay on their jobs during the walkout.

WLB directed that any hard coal pay adjustment be made retroactive to April 30. The retroactive date in the soft coal case is April 1.

Addition of the hard coal dispute brought the number affected by the expected work stoppage to 625,000 with the following groups included: 453,000 bituminous miners working from so-called shipping mines with railroad sidings, 22,000 miners employed at nonshipping mines, 60,000 supervisory workers, 83,000 anthracite miners, and about 7000 supervisors.

3. War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson, acting under the recommendation of Solid Fuels Administrator Harold L. Ickes, directed the country's railroads to divert soft coal from their tracks to anyone certifying to have less than a 10 days' supply, and simultaneously forbid any coal consumer with more than a 10 days' supply of soft coal on hand to accept additional coal.

4. Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown announced that he had sent between 250 and 300 legal investigators to check staple food prices in 100 coal mining towns in five States.

5. The policy committee of the A. F. of L. Progressive Miners, which claims to represent 21,000 workers in Kentucky and Illinois, announced in Springfield, Ill., that it had agreed to a 30-day extension of its contracts, avoiding an immediate strike.

6. Lewis was disclosed to have informed his policy committee at a recent closed meeting that he considered it "grotesque" to set up a WLB panel to hear the coal case. He said no panel was needed to figure out that the mine workers would get no increase under WLB's "Little Steel" formula.

Lewis declared then that it would be a "folly and a farce" to attend the WLB hearing, it was learned.

7. There were indications that the relatively small number of miners employed in Utah, Wyoming, Colorado and northern New Mexico would continue working for the present because of the acute coal supply situation in the Far West.

8. Gov. Edward Martin of Pennsylvania announced at Harrisburg that the State would "do everything in its power to support the President." Asked if he might call out the State guard, he said the statement "covers every agency we've got."

Reports from the mining areas gathered by the Associated Press indicated that miners generally were supporting the strike move. However, at Portage, Pa., John Castel, president of the U. M. W. local 498, declared:

"I am in favor of continuing work under a retroactive basis in behalf of the welfare of the war effort. This is not time for personal prejudices."

F. A. Norman, president of a Fayette, Pa., local, stated, however: "If President Roosevelt came down to this patch himself and told these men to go back to work without an agreement, without a contract, they'd tell him, 'you go back and get an order from John L. Lewis. Then, we'll go back to work.'"

An extended coal strike would hit the Nation's steel mills hardest, it was believed. Steel men reported coal supplies on hand sufficient to operate three weeks or less at some of the bigger mills.

Ickes has estimated that there is now about a month's supply of coal above ground.

A spokesman for the United States Steel Corp. reported a two to three weeks supply on hand, but said operations at Gary, Ind., and South Chicago would be cut 25 per cent in the first week of the stoppage.

Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel, commented that "if there is a coal strike, it will be a matter of only two or three weeks before the industry is forced to shut down.

The Office of Price Administration yesterday announced 41 changes, all of 1 point each, in the value of foods rationed under the meat and fats program, the shifts to be effective tonight at 12:01 a. m.

Twenty-five products were reduced 1 point each and 16 were advanced, reductions occurring generally in the variety meats, canned fish, and other specialty groups already having a relatively low point value.

Advances were confined mostly to prime cuts—such as steaks and roasts—of beef, veal and pork.

Specifically, these foods will be 1 point cheaper Monday morning: Brains, sweetbreads, tails, tongues, tripe, lamb and mutton livers, shank ends of ham, spareribs, hocks and knuckles, pig snouts, bulk sausage, meat loaf, vienna sausage, and salad and cooking oils.

Steak Points Up

These foods will be 1 point higher: Beef steak of the round, top round, bottom round, round tip and flank varieties; round tip beef roast; veal steaks and cutlets; veal leg roast; pork steaks and chops; pork loin roast; sliced ready-to-eat tongue; fresh sausage with not less than 50 per cent meat and with less than 50 but not more than 20 per cent meat; souse and head cheese.

No changes were made in the regular cheese group, and OPA said indications were cheese is beginning to move normally now after a "sluggish rationing start."

Added to the rationed list were canned sea mussels, at 1 point a pound. Bouillon cubes, beef extract and all other meat extracts and concentrates—formerly listed at 7 points per pound—were removed from the rationing program.

Another change placed caviar and fish roe in the "all other" canned fish category and reduced their point value from 7 to 3 per pound. Both items have been moving very slowly under rationing.

The OPA said the "sausage problem" which developed during the early days of rationing has not been solved, as customers apparently prefer to consume meat in its original form. Point values for sausage were not lowered, however, because the agency declared this could not be done without diverting excessive amounts of fresh cuts to sausage.

"OPA believes it reasonable to expect that the manufacture of sausage will be reduced proportionately with the decrease in the amount of meat available," it was declared. The "sausage problem" will disappear when this reduction is made, it was indicated, and not before.

Free-Lunch Plan To Continue

The free lunch program in District schools, jeopardized ever so often by lack of funds or personnel, will continue until the end of the school year, the Commissioners noted yesterday in approving the re-appointment of the paid personnel until school closes.

OCD, Civilian Issue to Be Reconsidered

Resignations of the entire executive committee of the Civilian War Services, submitted to the District Commissioners after they refused financial support of the organization last week, will be reconsidered at a luncheon meeting to be held Monday. The resignations were supposed to have become effective last night.

The fact of reconsideration does not necessarily indicate that the resignations will be withdrawn, however. In the letter sent the Commissioners protesting the withdrawal of the bill which would have provided blackout funds for the Civilian War Services, Clarence Aspinwall, committee chairman, made it plain that the committee would continue to serve only if "the Commissioners see fit to reconsider their action."

In reply, the Commissioners hoped that "you will resolve the doubt expressed by your committee in favor of continuance of your activities." But as far as any hint of reconsideration on their part was concerned, the Commissioners only repeated their opinion that much good could be done by the organization "on a voluntary basis."

The dispute over the status of the War Services, formerly the Civilian Mobilization branch of District Civilian Defense, was seen to be resolving itself into an issue between local authority and the national OCD. Resolutions endorsing the Commissioners' decision that the War Services duplicate the work of existing public agencies too much to justify public expenditure have been received from a number of civic organizations. National OCD Director James M. Landis, on the other hand, has declared that the Commissioners' action may lead to "national tragedy."

The Commissioners, while following Landis' office on a broad policy basis, have made it clear that they do not feel bound to accept Landis' suggestions where the peculiar needs of Washington indicate different courses.

The other members who "regretfully reached the conclusion that they could perform no useful services" under the Commissioners' terms are: Floyd D. Akers, Coleman Jennings, Miss Elizabeth Houghton, J. R. Pinkett, Mrs. Harlan F. Stone and Walter Tobriner.

Jap Sub Sunk Off Aleutians; April Ship Toll Shows Drop

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

Blasted by two well-placed depth-bombs, a Japanese submarine was sunk off the Aleutians by one of the Navy's big, lumbering Catalina patrol planes, it was announced yesterday.

Report of this success over enemy subs in the Pacific was followed by good news about the U-boat situation in the Atlantic.

Secretary Knox told his press conference late yesterday that Allied ship sinkings during the month of April were "much lower" than during the preceding month. He warned, however, against putting too much significance on the drop as the Battle of the Atlantic has been a succession of ups and downs.

Officials Pleased

Naval officials, however, were quite pleased over the evident success of the measures taken to combat the Axis spring submarine offensive. Sinkings during the month of March had been higher than during prior months and the prospects were that April would see even more intense Nazi U-boat activity.

The announcement of the destruction of a Japanese submarine by a Catalina patrol bomber said that the attack occurred some time ago, but that it had not been reported previously.

The feat won for the pilot of the plane the Navy Cross—but he never received it. Machinist Leland L. Davis, of Hattiesburg, Miss., went out on another patrol flight the same day he sank the Jap sub, and failed to return. He is listed as missing.

Telling of the attack on the Jap sub, the Navy said:

"The Navy bomber was on a patrol mission when the Japanese submarine was sighted running on the surface eight miles away. Machinist Davis flew into the clouds to escape detection, came out one mile from the submarine as it began to submerge, and plunged downward in a bombing run.

"Two depth charges were released just ahead of the wake. Almost immediately the submarine blew its tanks and emerged, bow first, with a large oil slick spreading from either side of its hull.

"Members of the Catalina's crew opened fire with their machine guns and raked the submarine from bow to stern, but the depth charges had dealt the underseas craft a fatal blow. Within a few minutes the Japanese vessel sank stern first in a death dive."

Earlier in the day, the Navy reported that a Japanese patrol of one officer and eight men had been discovered on the western coast of Guadalcanal and wiped out by American troops.

There was no indication as to whether the patrol was a remnant of the enemy forces which were on the island until organized resistence ended February 9, or a reconnaissance party recently put ashore at night. The communique, however, said the Japs were "attempting to escape" when discovered.

Solomons Bases Raided

The Navy also reported four attacks by American planes on Japanese bases in the Solomons Thursday. Flying Fortreses bombed Kahili in the Shortland Island area early in the morning. Avenger torpedo bombers and Dauntless dive bombers, escorted by Lightnings and Corsairs, attacked the enemy base at Gatere on the southwestern coast of Kolombangara Island in the central Solomons and a pier and an antiaircraft position were destroyed.

The same type planes assaulted Pelpeli, starting a fire at the enemy base.

Avengers and Dauntless dive bombers, with Wildcat fighter escort, also attacked Munda, scoring hits on the airfield runway, an antiaircraft position and a plane park.

All of our planes returned.

Heinrichs to Be Finnish Army Head

Stockholm, Sweden, April 30 (AP). Gen. Axel E. Heinrichs, Finnish chief of staff, was reported today to have succeeded Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim temporarily as commander in chief of the Finnish forces.

Heinrichs is a member of the old Jaeger group of Finnish officers trained in Germany and is regarded here as an outstanding field officer with pro-German leanings.

Roosevelt Pressing For Doughton Bill

Showdown Nears; Vote on Measure Expected Tuesday

By Cecil B. Dickson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The Roosevelt Administration yesterday was revealed as bringing tremendous pressure on Democrats in the House to support the Doughton compromise pay-as-you-go tax plan.

A vote on the measure is slated in the House Tuesday, when a showdown also will come on the modified Carlson-Ruml bill. Both majority and minority reports from the Ways and Means Committee on the different plans will be made public today. Confidential prints of the Democratic report were circulated among party leaders yesterday.

[House Republican Leader Martin pledged yesterday that he would seek to send a pay-as-you-go tax bill to the Senate by Tuesday night, and said he hoped it will be a version of the Ruml plan.

[Martin, back in his office at the Capitol after nearly a week's absence, told The Post that he had found overwhelming sentiment "at home" for the Ruml plan. But he said he wanted to confer with other members before predicting the outcome.

["I'm hopeful of the result next Tuesday," Martin said. "I believe the members after their visits home will gauge the sentiment and decide the people should have the tax bill they want."—Editor's note.]

Word reached Capitol Hill that President Roosevelt is taking a direct hand in the fight, since Secretary Morgenthau threw the full support of the Treasury behind the Doughton bill, imposing a 20 per cent payroll levy effective July 1, and applying 1941 income tax rates and exemptions on 1942 income.

Murray Supporter Also

The Congress for Industrial Organization, meantime, abandoned its support of the more liberal Robertson-Forand bill to grant 75 per cent forgiveness of 1942 income taxes, and came out for the Doughton bill, which will forgive about 41 per cent of the 1942 income imposts.

C. I. O. President Philip Murray sent letters to Democrats and Republicans alike today, asking them to support the Doughton proposal as "an effective compromise" and to oppose the Carlson-Ruml bill.

The Doughton plan, Murray wrote, "will result in a forgiveness of the major portion of the 1942 tax liability for the low-income groups but with a higher percentage of the 1942 taxes for the middle and higher income groups than that originally proposed by the C. I. O. plan," but:

In light of the present situation, the C. I. O. is willing to extend it support to the Doughton plan as an effective compromise.

"In so doing, the C. I. O. expressly reasserts the position which it has taken with reference to the 1943 tax program, which has yet to be considered by Congress; (Mr. Roosevelt's request for 16 billion dollars in new revenue). (A) That the so-called victory must be repealed, and (B) personal exemptions must be increased to assure a minimum standard for the low income groups."

Close Vote Expected

Representative Hebert (Democrat), Louisiana, who supported the original Ruml proposal, advised Representative Carlson (Republican), Kansas that Speaker Sam Rayburn and New Deal officials had brought so much personal and political pressure on the bloc of pro-Ruml Democrats, that "we may lose a number of votes."

His Ship Was Sunk

Aged Seaman To Sign Again With Brother

New Orleans, April 30 (INS).—Jock Simonsen's kid brother is going to sign on with him for his next trip, Jock said tonight.

Jock had just been released from a seamen's rest home where he was sent for convalescence after his ship was shelled and sunk by a Nazi submarine.

Five of Jock's shipmates were killed and six were wounded. The survivors were rescued by a Cuban ship.

Asked if he intended to retire following his experience, Jock, who is less than 5 feet tall, stuck out a pugnacious jaw and barked:

"Hell no! My brother's going with me on my next trip."

Asked how old his brother was, Jock said:

"He's younger'n me. Going on 68, I believe."

Jock is 75 and has followed the sea for 50 years.

Von Arnim Commanding

London, April 30 (AP).—A copy of the March issue of the German illustrated weekly "Signal" reaching London tonight captioned a picture of Col. Gen. Jurgen Von Arnim "officer commanding Axis forces in Tunisia."

This was taken as supporting the disclosure of Allied headquarters in North Africa that Von Arnim took over command from Field Marshal Erwin Rommel that month.

10,000 Grade A Tires Deemed Available Here

Calling recent estimates of from five to six thousand Grade 1 tires on hand in the District "extremely low," Lewis Fisher, manager of the National Institute of Treading Standards, said yesterday that he figured there are closer to 10,000 available and unfrozen today by the OPA for B and C card holders.

Prices, he said, are fixed at 16 per cent above what they were in November, 1941, when all tires were called in by the Government and placed in warehouses and factories for redistribution. The increase, he said, is to cover costs of handling, shipping, regrading and reshipping.

Grade 2 tires, which includes low quality tires, factory seconds, damaged new tires and the so-called Victory line, are so scarce in Washington that Grade 1 has been made available to motorists who hitherto were eligible only for Grade 2.

Explaining Rubber Director William Jeffers' recent confirmation that production of Victory tires manufactured from reclaimed rubber ended March 31, Fisher said that the V-tires did not stand up under mileage as efficiently as did recapped tires, which are approximately 50 per cent less expensive.

Civilians should have little trouble in keeping rolling this year, he pointed out, as there are about 7 million new tires on hand in the Nation right now and 5 million more synthetic tires are due to be manufactured by this fall. These are in addition to 25 million recaps, Fisher said.

A survey of tire dealers showed that the popular-sized 600-16 tire will sell for $16.02 in most cases, with one firm reporting tires ranging from $16.02 to $19.45.

Whitcomb Draws Girl's Picture As Hecht's Bond Sales Soar

TYPIFIES THE GIRL SCOUT—Janet Colson was the subject of this original drawing by Jon Whitcomb, noted artist, and now a United States naval officer stationed in Washington. Janet, who is 12, lives at 1610 W Street Southeast, and is a second class Girl Scout attached to Troop 51. A 7B student at Kramer Junior High School, she was assigned by her troop leader yesterday to man the Freedom Scroll at Hecht's upon which all bond buyers at the Four Freedoms Bond rally inscribe their names under a message addressed to the President of the United States

War bond sales in the Treasury Department-Saturday Evening Post bond show at Hecht's rocketed steadily yesterday, until by day's end Washingtonians had bought some $40,000 worth—bringing total bond sales since Monday to $714,000.

If credit can go to anyone besides the good citizens who bought the bonds, it must be handed to a group of talented persons who highlighted and lent their own enthusiasm to yesterday's program.

When Artist Jon Whitcomb approached 12-year-old Janet Colson, she thought he was about to sign the long "Freedom Scroll" for bond buyers which she, a Girl Scout attached to Troop 51, was managing.

"I'm going to draw your picture because you're doing a good job," Whitcomb told the delighted little girl. So Janet, who lives at 1610 W Street Southeast, turned her post temporarily over to a fellow Scout and posed happily.

Girl Scouts on Job

Whitcomb's drawings, familiar to thousands of magazine readers, now hang beside those of Norman Rockwell and other well-known artists as part of the bond show on Hecht's fourth floor. Since last summer, however, when Whitcomb donned the uniform of the U. S. Navy, his widely recognized talents have been devoted to illustrations for magazine articles, stories and books which will promote recruiting of SPARS, WAVES and Navy nurses.

Now a Naval lieutenant attached to the Navy's Incentive Bureau, the handsome young artist is also painting morale posters for shipyards and factories throughout the country engaged in Navy contracts.

The Girl Scouts, too, not content merely with "guarding" the Freedom Scroll, late yesterday afternoon participated in a flag ceremony, with Troop 14 doing the honors before a considerable audience.

Sports Program Today

At 3:30 in the afternoon, Marine Capt. Donald N. Carpenter and First Lieut. Herbert L. Merillat sent bond sales upward with accounts of life among our soldiers and sailors on Guadalcanal and Alaska.

"It isn't hard for us to think of you in Washington when we're fighting far away," said Captain Carpenter, whose home is at 5421 Nevada Avenue Northwest, Chevy Chase, Md., and who is a former president of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association. "Perhaps it won't be too much to ask that you think of us by buying bonds and stamps," he told his audience. And they did.

Yesterday's program closed with Helen Virginia Meyer's fashion show, with models wearing authentic reproductions of costumes worn by American women nurses and workers during World War I. Today's proceedings will be built around an all-day sports program, with members of prominent baseball teams and other sports groups on hand to autograph bond covers.

Oil Pipeline Crews Armed In Labor Fight

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, April 30.—B. E. Hull, head of War Emergency Pipeline, Inc., said today workmen on a vital auxiliary oil line at Illmo, Mo., near Cape Girardeau, had armed themselves because he said union organizers had intimidated and threatened them.

Hull said a fight in a Cape Girardeau hotel between members of the two groups had resulted in the jailing of two or three men who are now out on bond.

The sheriff of the county, Hull said, "insists it is a matter for the United States Government and that he is powerless to act."

Hull said one contractor engaged in hauling pipe and equipment to the construction scene, has employed armed guards as protection against what he said was "plain intimidation of the men by organizers who have been offered work and have refused it.

"The organizers insist," Hull said, "that all they want is the union dues."

The auxiliary line is part of a cross-country installation to speed the transportation of oil to the East Coast.

Return to Work Voted

Lock Haven, Pa., April 30 (AP).—The 2000 striking employes of the Piper Aircraft Corporation voted today to return to work "under protest" Monday morning, ending a week's stoppage of war production.

The vote followed a back-to-work appeal by the workers' union, the International Association of Machinists (A. F. of L.), and Federal and State mediators.

Wheeler Tells of Red-Jap War Material Deal

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Capitol rumors of war materials deals between Russia and Japan were given public utterance yesterday as Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell continued conversations widely believed to presage moves to strengthen the United Nations military position in the China-Burma-India war theater where Stilwell is the top American Army commander.

The general conferred for more than a half hour with President Roosevelt at the White House while at the Capitol Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, made public a letter in which he made the unqualified declaration that:

"Our ally, Russia, which has put up a gallant fight against Germany, is dealing so freely with our enemy, Japan."

Wheeler said that he, "like many others," was "disturbed" by evidence of Russian-Japanese dealings. He explained that he had reference to the Soviet's recent renewal of a fishing-rights treaty with Japan. He declined to comment on reports that the two nations have exchanged materials mutually beneficial to their prosecution of their separate wars.

Rumors have been current at the Capitol for several days that Russia has been supplying the Japanese with oil, vital to her war with the United States and Great Britain, in exchange for rubber which the Soviet needs in her struggle with Germany.

Aggressive Action Urged

Wheeler warned that "the Japanese are becoming more and more strongly entrenched in China, in Burma, in the Philippines and throughout the South Pacific."

Following a line urged by Senators Chandler of Kentucky and Thomas of Utah (Democrats), and others in the House as well as in the Senate, Wheeler declared:

"Unless more aggressive action is taken now against the Japs I am fearful that it will take a long time and the lives of many thousands of American boys before we can dislodge them from the countries which they have taken."

Wheeler stated that "while I want to see Hitler and Hitlerism destroyed in the shortest possible time, I believe that our greatest menace is in the Pacific."

Pacific Aid Sought

The letter was written to one of Wheeler's constituents, Mrs. Opal L. Bartholf, who appealed for increased aid for General MacArthur in the South Pacific.

Stilwell's meeting with Roosevelt was the first between the two since the start of the war. The general declined to discuss the conference with reporters. He remarked that he liked to talk, but said he was "under wraps."

Stilwell came to Washington Wednesday with Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the Fourteenth American Air Force in China. Chennault will confer with Mr Roosevelt today.

Chennault Confers

Chennault, leader of the famed Flying Tigers, conferred yesterday with Secretary of War Stimson and General Marshall, chief of staff. He visited briefly with members of the House delegation from Louisiana, where the general has a plantation.

Since the arrival of the two generals in the Capital, speculation has centered on the circumstance that transport problems to the China-Burma-India theater will be shortened once the extinction of German and Italian resistance in Tunisia has opened communications through the Mediterranean.

59 Billion to Be Asked for Army

and other ordnance, as well as planes, would be increased under the new measure.

But more than any other one factor, the size of the bill apparently was attributable to the Army's growing manpower. The last bill was based on an Army average of 4,600,000 men through the present fiscal year. The new measure would allow for a 3,000,000-man increase, or maintenance of an average of 7,600,000 over the 12 months ending June 30, 1944. It was pointed out that as more men with dependents are drafted, and as more men are sent overseas, extra compensation alone would amount to a major item.

Plans No Longer Vague

"In writing the last war appropriation bill, we did not know exactly how many men we would have to transport across the seas and just where we would send them," said Snyder. "Nobody knew then that we would invade North Africa. Now we have more definite information on Army needs and a more formidable plan."

Snyder said the hitherto unequaled size of the last war appropriation bill had demonstrated its "economy" in two ways: "It was not necessary to come back to Congress for more funds. More important, we were able to do things on a big scale and could get better contracts by bargaining a year ahead. The same is true this year."

The war subcommittee chairman said he believed "the people have a greater confidence in the Army today than ever before because, all things considered, our equipment has been proven in battle to be definitely superior to the equipment of the enemy."

His mother came from there, but Ireland isn't heaven to Wilbur Mackey—just a place where the school boys are strictly regimented and the masters think nothing of hitting you over the head with a leather strap. Mac's year in a prep-school in Limerick, and his vacation travels in England, inspired him only with a strong desire to return to his home town of Davenport, Iowa. Finding a depression staring him in the face on leaving Knox College, Mackey switched from one job to another until he landed on the New York American as copy-boy, working up quickly to a spot on the telegraph desk. In 1938 he came to The Washington Post, worked on the copy desk for several years, and then became telegraph editor about a year ago. As telegraph editor he handles about 80,000 words of news from The Post's wire services every day—exclusive of their Washington news—sorting out the important material, selecting, editing, sending a flow of wire news to the copy desk. Though Mackey's newspaper experience has been almost entirely at editing, one of his few outside assignments was on one of the most exciting stories of the pre-war years—the crash of the dirigible Von Hindenburg. The flash came in over the wire just as the morning American's bulldog (first evening) edition had gone to press; the reporters were all out to dinner and only a few desk men were available. Mackey was hustled into a car and shot out to Lakehurst, N. J., where he worked all night and all the next day on the story. His most exciting desk assignment: pinch-hitting for an absent telegraph editor the afternoon and night of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Sex Education

Amid the considerable pother provoked by the proposed sex education program for the Washington senior high schools it is well to keep one point clear: the main controversy is not over the value of sex education per se, but over the merits of this particular course in the subject. An outline of the program prepared for the Washington senior high schools was published in last Sunday's Post. It is part of a general course in health education, three weeks of which are devoted to the various phenomena of human reproduction, beginning with the anatomy and physiology of the sexual organs, conception and gestation, and gradually working into such matters as sexual psychology, sexual ethics, birth control and the relationship of sex and love. Identical instructions, it appears, would be given to boys and girls, though, of course, in separate classes and by teachers of the same sex as the students. The average age of the students receiving this instruction would be 15 or 16.

The program, as outlined, strikes us as unnecessarily elaborate, especially since it would be given without discrimination to young adolescents of varying degrees of intelligence and comprehension, coming from widely varying environments and having even more widely differentiated emotional natures. It might also be asked, without disparagement, whether high school teachers have themselves the knowledge to enter into so many ramifications of what is, after all, not the simplest of subjects. There is indeed a question whether anybody understands the innumerable mysteries of this most delicate of all human relationships enough to speak authoritatively about anything beyond the merest matter-of-fact biological and physiological details.

We note that the concluding section of the course is to be devoted to "questions." We wouldn't envy the teacher whose job it would be to answer them. This reminds us of an observation by the late Hugo Muensterberg that one who undertakes to answer questions about sex will soon find himself being asked questions to which he cannot possibly find answers, not even by searching every page of Havelock Ellis' celebrated six-volume opus.

Air Bombing

Can Germany be knocked out of the war by bombing alone? The answers to this question have run the gamut from an enthusiastic "yes" to an equally vehement "no." The Seversky, Ziffs and other air power zealots had their argumentative innings a year or so ago. At that time, of course, their recommendations seemed to be beyond realization. Allied air strength was only just beginning to come into its own. The opposite school then won a good deal of support for the contention that the war could only be won by a land invasion of the Continent and the smashing of the German army. And this remains the prevailing theory of our high strategists. Still the voices of those who believe Germany can be bombed out are again being heard.

Thus, an expert writing in the current Reader's Digest, Francis Vivian Drake, makes out a very plausible case. He gives some interesting statistics to prove, at least to his own satisfaction, that it would not take more planes than we and our allies are now in a position to produce to bring about the industrial paralysis of the Reich and with it the collapse of Germany's war effort. He points out, for instance, that the bombing campaign of 1942 resulted in the dropping of 37,000 tons of bombs on Germany, with an estimated destruction of 2000 plants and the destruction or damaging of 558,000 homes. Possibly 750,000 Germans, he believes, were made homeless by these raids and 7 per cent of German war industry was wrecked. Yet this damage, he says, "was inflicted by a handful of fighting men—fewer than participated in the Dieppe commando raid." And the raids were "operated with less bombers at any one time than the United States now produces in a month."

"If this underpowered unit could destroy 7 per cent of industrial Germany," he asks, "what would it take to step up the destruction until Germany could no longer keep her front lines supplied?" His reply is that German war production can be knocked out in six months if the bomb equivalent of 225,000 tons were dropped on the Reich. Such an effort would involve the full employment of 3000 heavy bombers, with a maximum replacement of 600 bombers a month. If William L. Batt's estimate of an American plane production this year of 100,000 planes, an increasing number of them heavy bombers, is correct, it is evident that we are now or will be before very long in a position to exert such an effort.

It was said before the war that it would begin in the air and end in the mud. To the lay mind, we should imagine, this still applies. At any rate, to our view it would be folly to think of a bombing offensive against Germany as a substitute for any invasion plans. Sooner or later we must establish a second front on the Continent if we are to bring Germany to heel. Territory must be occupied from the North Cape to the Aegean, for political as well as military reasons, and temporary administrative regimes set up. However, the known effects of bombardment seem destined to make the test increasingly lighter.

Home To Roost

The Senate presented a rather pathetic picture when it took up the case against John L. Lewis on Thursday. There was no question as to the attitude of those present. The czar of the United Mine Workers was denounced for defying the Government and threatening to sabotage the war effort. But the Senate had only words—sadly belated words—to pit against Mr. Lewis' formidable economic weapon. Whatever action it may take had to be postponed until next week and will thus trail along behind the crisis instead of preparing the way to meet it.

To the credit of the Senate it should be said that as long ago as 1941 it was aware of the problem which Mr. Lewis this week dumped on the steps of the White House. It passed in that year a bill specifically authorizing the President to take over and operate vital war plants closed by strikes or other labor disturbances. The House did not concur. Senator Connally, author of the bill, again pressed for its enactment a year ago until President Roosevelt requested him to pigeonhole the measure in favor of a no-strike agreement he was negotiating with labor leaders.

The Senate had notice weeks ago that one powerful labor leader, John L. Lewis, regarded this no-strike agreement which he had signed as a mere scrap of paper. When Mr. Lewis was before the Truman Committee he made it perfectly plain that he would not hesitate to call a strike if the WLB did not conform to his ideas of equity. That obviously left the WLB in a precarious position, for it has no foundation in law. It functions by agreement among the White House, labor leaders and a handful of employers. The employers who participated in the conference leading to the creation of the WLB signed the so-called agreement only at the dictation of the President. Yet Congress did nothing to strengthen the arm of the WLB or the President in meeting this crisis. And before it gets around to acting next week the coal strike may be in progress or the mines may be in the hands of the Government.

President Roosevelt may decide to take over the mines without specific legislation if the miners reject his back-to-work appeal. Several war plants have been seized under similar circumstances. There is now more precedent than law for this policy. The Selective Service Act permits the President to take over and operate plants when the responsible heads "refuse" to take Government orders, to give war equipment preference, or to agree to reasonable prices. But in the present case there is no refusal on the part of the management to comply with Government orders. Only by severely stretching the law can it be regarded as touching the current situation. Of course, the Administration is chiefly responsible for this lack of preparedness. But Congress has foolishly permitted itself to be cajoled into inaction and now it is left in the embarrassing position of trying to lock the door after the horse has been stolen.

Treasury Choice

The compromise current tax payment plan recently introduced by Representative Doughton and approved by a majority of the Ways and Means Committee has been given the blessing of the Treasury. "By providing a true pay-as-you-go system," the Treasury says, "the bill will bring in revenue more certainly and more promptly, thus helping to curb inflation." A true pay-as-you-go system! What does the Treasury mean? To be sure, the bill would put the country on a current basis, but only by a process of levying more than a year's taxes in one year. That this is done in the name of pay-as-you-go is a testimony merely to fiscal disingenuousness.

The main fact about the Doughton bill is that during the next three years it would increase the taxes of a large majority of income-tax payers holding only a fraction of the national income. Instead of making a clean break with the past, as would be the case under a "true" pay-as-you-go scheme, the bill provides for the recomputation of taxes on 1942 incomes in such fashion as to cancel not quite half the aggregate tax liability for that year. The remaining uncanceled tax liability for 1942, estimated at 4800 million dollars, would be payable in three annual installments beginning in March, 1944. Persons willing or able to make payment in full in 1944 would get a discount of 6 per cent.

The incidence of the bill is neither fair nor anti-inflationary. About seven million new taxpayers in the lowest taxable income brackets would be put at once on a current basis. That is to say their 1942 tax liabilities would be canceled in full. The man with a net income of $1800 (married and without dependents) would have to make a small additional payment of $7.33 next year. Or he might take his 6 per cent discount and become fully current on his tax payments in 1944 by turning over to the Government a lump sum of $21. The size of the payments on the "unforgiven" part of the 1942 tax liability rapidly mounts as we ascend the income-tax ladder. At the $100,000 income level the taxpayer would have a choice of paying $17,600 additional in income taxes for three successive years or making a single payment of $49,500. That sum added to the other income taxes currently payable would bring total tax payments up to 118 per cent of an income of $100,000. In the topmost income brackets the taxpayer is confronted by an income tax in excess of 100 per cent, even if he elects to spread the payments for "unforgiven" 1942 taxes over a three-year period.

In other words, the income tax becomes an outright capital levy. Thus the individual with an income of $500,000 would pay a tax amounting to 111 per cent of his net income in three successive years, or he might turn over to the Government a sum equal to 153 per cent of his income next March as the price of being put on a current tax basis.

Far from objecting to an increase in income taxes, The Post believes that rates should be sharply increased. But to be effective in combating inflation, tax increases in the lower brackets would have to be substantial. For the great bulk of the wartime additions to income is to be found in those brackets. The Doughton bill spares these lower income groups, however. It merely applies extreme pressure to a limited number of taxpayers in the upper group. Certainly the income-tax system ought not to be metamorphosed at top into an outright capital levy without debating the issue on its merits. Calling such a confiscatory tax program a plan for putting taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis may disguise, but it cannot not alter, the fact that the Doughton bill would entail a radical departure from existing tax policy.

We have pointed out repeatedly that it would be entirely feasible to provide for the collection of taxes at the source out of wages and salaries without changing income-tax schedules and without shifting tax payments to a current basis. Such a method of collection is badly needed to speed tax collections and round up tax dodgers. Unfortunately the decision of the Administration to back the highly controversial Ways and Means bill is likely to hold up action by the House and is virtually certain seriously to delay Senate action on tax legislation. Meantime the inflationary gap will widen and the problem of arresting inflation will become more difficult.

Point Values

The flexibility of the point-rationing system, which makes it possible to allow for ever-changing supply conditions, is one of its recognized advantages. However, the recent reduction in point values of certain canned fruit juices, soups and frozen vegetables as well as outright removal of rationing restrictions in certain cases are not mere adjustments of the expected kind. They are corrections made necessary by initial errors of judgment on the part of OPA officials. Of course, mistakes are inevitable in the initial stages of a rationing program. But it ought not to have required experimentation to discover that most consumers would not squander points to obtain soups when such purchases entailed going without solid canned products. Similarly, customers are not disposed to spend many points on frozen foods when fresh vegetables are obtainable without surrendering any points at all.

Commonsense as well as a knowledge of market conditions is called for in setting point values for food products, especially when the total amounts of processed foods that any one person can buy is severely limited. Our experience to date with point rationing has been both enlightening and disillusioning. It has shown how difficult it is to substitute fallible human judgments for the unrestricted bids and offers that used to determine the prices of products and direct the flow of goods into distributive channels. It has shown, too, that the pattern of retail buying is radically altered when the amounts that may be bought are limited and purchases are the result of a choice between this article and that one.

The more inclusive point rationing becomes the more difficult it is to foresee its effect upon buying demands, and to avoid the wastes that result from miscalculation. The moral seems to be that we should confine rationing under the point system to a limited number of essential commodities instead of attempting to maintain a comprehensive form of control that is almost impossible of enforcement and highly demoralizing in its effects upon distribution of goods.

KITTEN AND DOG

The gray-brown kitten, smaller than my hand,
Bounded to meet us up the hillside stair,
Frisking with glee; and did not understand
What lean jaw-snapping madness glowered there.

Bristling, the dog looked on, while from his throat
A low growl rumbled; at his leash he strained,
And well I knew that woolly gray-brown coat
Would have been slashed . . . till but red tufts remained.

The kitten halted; childish clear blue eyes
Widened with wonder; but she would not go,
And, troubled by her innocent surprise,
For her own sake I chased her from the foe.

Then, as I rambled off, while still the hound,
With long jaws gaping, tugged to be released,
I wished so mild an ending always crowned
The tale of guileless Beauty and the Beast.

Plan Military Aid

MEXICAN official sources permit me today to answer definitely for the first time a question that has been asked over and over by millions of Americans and Latin Americans ever since Pearl Harbor.

The question is: Will Latin-American expeditionary forces fight side by side with our own men in the Second World War?

The definite answer comes with confirmation from the above sources that a military mission composed of the Mexican section of the Mexican-American Joint Defense Board has been sent to North Africa to make studies preliminary to sending Mexican troops to that theater of war.

The mission was designated immediately after President Roosevelt and President Manuel Avila Camacho conferred recently. There can be no doubt that final details of this first step toward placing Mexican soldiers in foreign theaters of war where our own are serving were settled by the two commanders in chief at their historic meeting.

Brazilian sources confirm that a Brazilian military mission has also been sent to North Africa. A strong press campaign for such a move on Brazil's part began soon after President Vargas and President Roosevelt conferred as the latter returned from Casablanca.

Camacho and Vargas

Both President Manuel Avila Camacho and President Vargas have repeatedly voiced their countries' desire to send soldiers abroad to fight with the armies of the democracies. The technical military problems involved are complex, however, and first have to be worked out.

Demands from Cuban spokesmen for Cuban participation in the active fighting have been heard from Havana on the air in recent days. Reports that President Batista and President Manuel Avila Camacho will soon meet to discuss the matter are current in official circles in Havana this week.

The time and place and the number of Latin-American troops who will serve in foreign fields will not be made public so long as this information could possibly be of use to the enemy. But every American can now know that our Latin-American neighbors and allies will not only contribute their sweat and their treasure to the war against the Axis, but also their blood.

There are many fronts in this war where Latin-American troops will have a natural advantage. Men from Mexico's Gulf coast lowlands, from Brazil's equatorial region and the Cuban littoral can adapt more quickly to the humid tropics of the Southwest Pacific than men from temperate climates. The conditions of the North African desert are very like those of parts of northern Mexico and the bulge of Brazil, regions that traditionally furnish numerous tough fighters to their respective governments. Mexico has had desert and jungle units training for months, and the Brazilian army has had large forces in the desertic bulge and in her humid equatorial coast areas equally long.

Mexico started to reorganize her army for hemisphere defense early in 1941 and began to build a draft army in March, 1942. Full cooperation with United States forces in the defense of Gulf and Pacific coasts has been in force since soon after the Rio conference, when the Joint Mexican-American Defense Board began to operate.

Brazil has had compulsory military service for years and counted a half-million trained reserves when war broke out. An army of a million men is now her goal.

Shipping Difficulties

Necessity to employ ships in supplying Russian, British and United States field armies limits the size of Latin-American armies and the speed with which they can be trained. Brazil, Mexico, Cuba and other New World countries have been receiving some lend-lease equipment. But to send Latin-American troops abroad requires double shipping, first to get equipment to them and then to transport soldiers and materiel to battle areas. Shipping will remain the limiting factor.

President Roosevelt and President Manuel Avila Camacho at their recent meeting once more sharply called the world's attention to the inter-American system of international cooperation as model for the postwar world. Till now this system has been cooperating to keep peace in the hemisphere and defend it from attacks from without. Cooperation in a military offensive in foreign fields carries the system one step further and completes the pattern.

As important as this is, it means that at the peace table Latin-American nations will sit with the countries that fought the war. Their presence there with the United States will give the New World a stronger voice in writing the peace.

Invasion Jitters

By Barnet Nover

Dr. Goebbels Reassures Germany

HAVING FED the German people a heavy diet of gloom recently, Dr. Goebbels now finds it necessary to revive their flagging spirits with a hypodermic of optimism.

Thus, in his latest article in Das Reich, Hitler's propaganda minister asserts flatly that an invasion of the European continent is a "thing impossible."

This is certainly what the German people would like to believe and it is what Dr. Goebbels wants them to believe, particularly at this time. For as the Allied air offensive against Germany has increased and as the last Axis foothold on the African continent has been whittled down, Germany's invasion jitters have mounted.

DR. GOEBBELS casually dismisses both the Allied aerial offensive and the Axis reverses in Africa as of no practical importance.

What happens on the periphery of the war, he says in this article, does not count so long as the center is intact. And in the center Germany and her allies retain complete control.

"The Axis has a free hand in the East and commands all possibilities for the offensive. British air raids are offset two and three fold by the performance of German U-boats. British air raids are already being repaid and they will be evened up completely one of these days."

THESE CHEERFUL words are belied by Germany's actions.

If, as Dr. Goebbels claims, an invasion of Europe is really impossible, Hitler would hardly have squandered a quarter of a million men, a valuable portion of his diminishing Luftwaffe, much of the Axis' merchant tonnage and vast quantities of material in his Tunisian venture.

That venture was undertaken with the full realization that sooner or later the Axis would be driven out of Africa. The intent, from the first, was to gain time in which to organize the defenses of Europe and possibly mount one last large-scale offensive in Russia.

THE NORTH AFRICAN campaign has certainly gained time for the Axis for it is now six months since British and American forces were landed in Morocco and Algeria.

Hitler has also gained time by his all-out submarine campaign which resulted, last year, in the destruction of a vast fleet of Allied merchant ships, the tonnage sunk being actually a million tons greater than was built in 1942 in all Allied yards.

But these six months have witnessed no decline in German invasion jitters, rather an intensification of them. For all of the efforts made by the Nazis to build a wall around the continent the so-called Fortress of Europe remains far more a figure of speech than an actuality.

On the other hand, despite tremendous shipping losses, the Allies are much stronger than they were six months ago. And they are manifesting their strength by the relentless pounding of German industrial centers, a process which is certain to be intensified as the months go by.

THE FACT is, and Hitler no doubt realizes this fully, that no system of fortifications can long keep out the Allies from Europe once they decide to invade the continent and are prepared to pay the price such an invasion will entail. And as Allied air power mounts and Axis air power declines the odds in favor of a successful invasion go up.

Indeed, the construction of the so-called Fortress Europe with its coastal pill-boxes strung along the periphery of the continent all the way from the North Cape to the Aegean is basically designed to serve the same purpose as the Tunisian campaign. It is designed to delay the Allies and make their advance toward the heart of the Axis as costly as possible.

IT IS, in this connection, a very revealing indication of German uneasiness that the Reich authorities have now found it necessary to withdraw the parole given the officers and men of the Royal Netherlands army toward the end of 1940.

Already some 18,500 of these officers, noncoms and men have been rounded up and placed in concentration camps near the German border. This, it is reported from Berne, is just the "first batch," however.

In part this move may be part of that unceasing Nazi effort to acquire more cannon-fodder. It is believed that those Dutch soldiers will be offered the choice of joining Axis military units or suffer punishment.

But another reason for this action, which makes a mockery of the honeyed words the Nazis have recently been addressing to the conquered peoples of Europe, is very probably that Hitler fears the presence at points close to the coast of men trained in arms, men who once an invasion begins, could swell the ranks of the Allies. The process of making all the conquered peoples hostages of the Axis goes on apace.

Overtime Pay

Since Mr. Kluttz in his column, "The Federal Diary," has consistently favored prospective overtime-pay legislation for Federal employes, something should be said in opposition to what can be considered, in an intelligent and public-spirited sense, as extremely faulty thinking. Issue should be taken with the statement in Mr. Kluttz's column of April 22 that if the House had been swayed by logic, the report of the conference committee would have been approved.

It must be clear now that the key war agencies have played heavily the recruiting device of higher initial salaries. Reclassifications upward have been so frequent and so many in number that it has almost literally become an unannounced policy to award salary increases quite irrespective of the classification principles upon which promotions are allegedly based. Thus, the effect of the bill, approved by a conference committee of the two Houses, is to pyramid substantial salary increases via mandatory overtime pay upon a Federal pay structure already changed upward to no small degree. While base rates have not changed for jobs within any given class, they have been advanced very markedly as a general rule through reclassification and abnormal beginning rates. If this be true, how can industrial wage earners be blamed reasonably for threatening the price line by demands of further increases when the Government itself supplies them with an excellent bargaining point?

Unless my information is clearly in error, hundreds of thousands of Federal employes are now receiving total salaries well beyond the over-all increase in the price level when compared to their salaries and regional or local price indices in September, 1939. Why then treat this class of workers as though they were depression employes in a declining industry? The vast majority are patriotic Americans and have not to my knowledge been spoken for by any truly representative spokesman.

Perhaps this is a lone dissenting voice. However, that is another instance when the Congress might act with more deliberation were it possessed of an independent and reliable body of data supplied by its own fact-finders.

The Zoo

Now it is spring and we all want to visit the Zoo. Why can't we have a map of it? I have searched for a little folder to cost a few cents which will show where my favorite animals are to be found, but even the charts which used to be visible in the animal houses seem to have vanished.

Could The Post spare a part of a page for such a map? Many of us would appreciate it.

And—what a joke—or is it? The air-raid shelter is under the lions and tigers. Suppose a big bomb crashed—is it a joke, after all? But it's true!

General de Gaulle

I write as one of the many people both in your country and mine who admire Gen. Charles de Gaulle as the outstanding citizen of the French Republic who stood for the honor of his country and the sanctity of the pledged word when so many of his countrymen failed France and her allies.

It is, putting it mildly, surprising to read the version of General de Gaulle's character and opinions as given by your columnist, Mr. Drew Pearson, in Monday's Post. It is still more surprising to find this version attributed to President Roosevelt.

Home Front

I am sitting here in the Union Station waiting for the train to take me back. The station is full of boys going somewhere. God only knows where.

I have been reading your paper and thinking over the comments and I would like to let you know how we fellows feel concerning the whole thing.

You have seen my picture and my buddies' pictures in the papers. We are back for a few days' rest from the battle front. We are on our way now to give our lives for our country. But we hate to die for rotten politics, filthy black markets, and strikes. We are not afraid to die, but we want to give our lives for something worth while. I would much rather die for the fine things that might or could come in the future rather than things that have been in the past.

I wish some writer would tell the American people how we boys from the battle front feel about the home front.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Some Grand News

Elmer Twitchell who has been morose, sour and dejected lately turned happy and carefree today. "It's the abolition of those ceilings," he said cheerfully.

"What ceilings?" asked his brother Luke.

"The ones on book-ends, lightning rods, dinner bells, weather vanes, wrought-iron balustrades and novelties made of butterfly wings, seashells or gourds," he repiled excitedly. "Boy, do I feel better!"

"I was all fixed so far as book-ends were concerned," he continued, "but my lightning rod, dinner bell and balustrade situation was critical. What was your position?

"I haven't been doing as well as I might with the old dinner bell," sighed Luke, "but I assumed there was no chance of getting a new one."

"Even if you get a new one and you don't notice much difference it will do something to your morale to ring it," said Elmer. "Sometimes a new tone will cause a stir in the kitchen. But it's the lifting of lightning rod ceilings that pleases me."

"I didn't know you used 'em," said Luke.

"I never did," explained Elmer. "But it's swell to know I can do so whenever I so desire. All the time lightning rods were hard to get I had a passion for them. I feel better about the weather vane outlook, too."

"Oh, I can go without weather-vanes in time of war," said Luke. "We have to make some sacrifices."

"So can I," replied Elmer, "but it gives me a feeling of oppression when I try to buy one and find it can't be had. One of the few things we could still depend on in this world was a weather vane. I hated to think of the Government controlling it in any way. I think we will all feel happier over the lifting of ceilings on balustrades, too."

"I must admit the balustrade situation hadn't bothered me," said Luke.

"That's because you are not a deep thinker," declared Elmer. "You probably have a good balustrade on your stairs but think of the homes that don't!"

"It's the freezing of novelties made of butterfly wings that cheers me," said Luke. "I can't take my butterfly wings or leave 'em alone. They're a must on my list."

"Mine, too," said Elmer. "I don't remember a time in the history of this country where a man or woman who felt like a novelty made of butterfly wings couldn't satisfy the appetite. That went for seashells and gourds, too."

"I didn't know the OPA had anything to do with seashells and gourds," said Luke. "It would have upset me."

"I had put in a supply of gourds, just in case, but I have been getting low on seashells," confessed Elmer.

"Did you notice that bird boxes, pin cushions and wigs have had their ceilings removed?" asked Luke.

"Yes, sir!" cried Elmer, "I meant to mention them. Let me have a bird box, a wig or a pin cushion when I want 'em and I'm a new man."

'Dreaded' Subject

It seems that all of the so-called "big shots" have recently been debating the expediency of teaching the "children" in our high schools about sex. They seem to think that we are too young to be taught such things because we might go around and discuss what we are taught among ourselves. They dislike the idea of the personal method used by some of the teachers in teaching us. They seem to think that such "taboo" things as sex should be taught individually, preferably by one's parents. I would like to discuss each of the points separately.

Firstly, the idea of our being too young is utterly ridiculous. They seem to think we are old enough to be drafted immediately upon graduating.

Secondly, how can we learn if we do not discuss things among ourselves? They have apparently overlooked the fact that that is the way we at first attained any knowledge of this "dreaded" subject.

Thirdly, in my high school, in which I am a senior, we are taught by a very competent teacher who knows his stuff. His method is very light. That is, he does not dramatize it or scare you with its "taboos." I might add that it is only taught to graduating seniors and not to any pupils in lower classes.

Fourth and last, the method of individual education by parents is a very great mistake. Many parents do not bother to take time to teach their children about sex, mainly because they are afraid to approach their children with such a delicate subject. Also, many times when they do attempt to impart some of their sex knowledge to their offspring they do not give them the correct facts which is even worse than not saying anything at all.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Stop, Look, And Listen

MUCH THE most important development in the coal dispute is the position taken by the other labor leaders — the opponents and rivals of Mr. John L. Lewis. They know that if Mr. Lewis is successful in defying the Government and obtains his wage demands, then the officials of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. and the railroad brotherhoods will be under irresistible pressure. Either they too break through the wage ceilings or they themselves will be broken by new leaders from their own rank and file.

LIPPMANN

For Mr. Green and Mr. Murray, then, everything is at stake on whether Mr. Lewis wins or loses. Yet they know also that though Mr. Lewis can and will be defeated on the fundamental issue of defying the Government in wartime, that in itself, though it can under no circumstances be compromised, will bring no lasting settlement. They know that wage rates can be held only if the workers are guaranteed their rations of food and other necessities at the officially promised prices. That is why the utmost attention must be paid to the warning they issued on Thursday that "unless the President's" stabilization program "is firmly and forcefully implemented at once with specific, decisive, and comprehensive action, labor can no longer hold its acceptance of this policy to remain in effect."

IT MAY sound astonishing to say so but the fact is that the Administration, the Congress, and the general public do not have a program for stabilizing the cost of living. To talk about "holding the line" is all very well, but prices cannot be stabilized by uttering words. To say, as the President did in his telegram to the mineworkers, that "violators of the law" will be "prosecuted" is not a program; never and nowhere, not even in a totalitarian state, have the prices of food been kept fixed by the police.

We are in trouble because we—and we means the Administration, Congress, and the general public—have failed to analyze correctly the elemental facts of the problem. We are refusing to learn from the practical experience of any other country. We are attempting by main force and awkardness, chiefly words, to ignore the simple truths of economics. The trouble lies in our failure to recognize that if we wish to freeze the retail prices of food and at the same time to make sure that enough food is produced, we cannot rely on a general freeze of all prices.

OUR whole campaign is based on this false assumption—namely that retail prices in the shops and prices paid to producers are tied together. They are not tied together and they cannot be tied together, and the program will be mere words and remain unworkable until we all recognize that we must pay the producers one set of prices—enough to assure the production of the right commodities in the right quantities—and that we must assure the consumers another set of prices—low enough and steady enough to maintain an adequate standard of life.

Nowhere else where the problem has been solved successfully—not in Canada or in Britain—have men made the mistake we are making of refusing to see that there has to be one set of prices for the producers and another set for the consumers—and that the spread between the two sets of prices has to be regulated by government subsidies and government purchasing.

THE British in the United Kingdom have operated price control with conspicuous success. This is universally admitted by all sections of British opinion. How have they done it? Not by our method of overall ceilings on everything and a general freezing of everything, backed by rhetoric and threats of prosecution.

Since the beginning of the war in 1939 the wholesale price index of food and tobacco has risen between 70 and 80 per cent. The cost of living index, which does not include tobacco, has risen 20 per cent. But these overall figures do not tell the true story. For actually the government did not decide to stabilize the cost of living until January 1941. At that time wholesale prices were, as compared with September 1939, at 160 and retail prices were at 125.

What happened after January 1941? Wholesale prices have risen as high as 180, and have stood between 170 and 180. But while wholesale prices have risen, retail prices have been reduced from 125 to 120 or a little less. This shows conclusively that it is possible to have two sets of prices—one rising where necessary assure the supply of food and the other stable or falling to protect the consumer.

THIS result has been achieved in Great Britain by various forms of skillful and shrewdly applied subsidies. In some cases the government pays subsidies directly to the producers. In others it buys the crop at an economic price and sells it to the retailers at a lower price. The principle always has been to see that the farmer, the importer, and the distributor, got enough money to assure the supply, and that the consumer got his ration at a fixed price.

The difference has been made up by the Government. In 1942 it cost the Government about 600 millions. To perform the same operation here would cost perhaps two billion dollars. This is a small sum to pay for stability in wartime, and in any event there is no other way yet devised by men which can bring about the kind of stability which is needed. The way consists in using government funds to insulate retail prices against the upward pressure of wholesale prices.

TO THIS method we shall have to come. For the only way to stabilize wages is, as Mr. Green and Mr. Murray have warned us, first to stabilize the cost of living. This cannot be done by quarreling with the farmers and squeezing them under rigidly frozen prices. It can be done only by accepting the fact that wholesale and retail prices cannot be tied together; that a spread between them is necessary and inevitable; and that wartime price control and wartime rationing depend upon regulating this spread by the use of subsidies.

On Justice Under Law

Force Shall Not Prevail

President Roosevelt declared last night that the only way to avoid future wars is by a "definite body of law, accepted and followed by nations in their relations."

The President's statement was contained in a message he sent the thirty-seventh annual meeting of the American Society of International Law.

Mr. Roosevelt said that "it is not sufficient to hope that international problems will automatically adjust themselves."

"We know too well that progress is achieved the hard way," asserted the Chief Executive, whose message was read to the society by Frederick B. Coudert, its president.

"Men on the battlefields are dying that civilization may be saved and that law by which we have learned to govern our conduct toward our neighbor, and not force, shall prevail.

"The body of law under which our civilization must advance must be a steadily growing one, tempered by past experience but capable of fulfilling the needs of a rapidly changing world.

Must Curb Lawlessness

"The world must have such law for its dependence. It cannot permit a recurrence of the present reign of lawlessness."

At the outset, the Chief Executive stated discussion of the rules that should govern relations between nations "tends to focus interest on a subject the importance of which is too little emphasized."

"There has scarcely been a time," said the President, "when there was greater need than now for constructive thinking looking to the supremacy of law, justice and common decency in the relations between nations and their peoples."

Rome's Ancient Empire and the Commonwealth of Nations evolved by Imperial Britain blazed the trail which planners of a free postwar world must follow, Francis B. Sayre, special Assistant Secretary of State, said at the society's meeting.

Sayre asserted enduring power and mastery in the past have been achieved by those nations which built their strength on foundations of law and justice.

They were "those nations and those peoples which have developed an understanding and a tolerance for other peoples, which have organized protective care for the weak as against the strong, which have sought to safeguard and strengthen the rights of the individual, irrespective of his race or color or physical strength or weakness."

Age-Old Ideal

The great ideal of justice to all alike before the law existed long before the rise of remembered empires. But, asserted Sayre, "it is highly significant that the two greatest bodies of law which the world has ever known—the Roman law and the English common law—enshrining this great principle, constituted the foundations upon which were built two of the greatest empires which the world has known."

"And it is equally significant," he added, "that the strength of these empires has rested primarily not upon the mere physical strength of their armies and their soldiers but upon their legal systems, upon their understanding and regard for the rights of other peoples and upon their progress in learning the great art of governing subject races.

"What Rome and England achieved for their own empires, through the moving up of their great systems of law for the protection of the weak against the strong and the guarantee of impartial justice to all alike, must in a sense be undertaken now for humanity. The whole world must build up a body of practice and a law giving expression to the conscience of mankind insofar as it relates to the rights of nations and of peoples."

Such a task is too much for one people; it can be achieved, Sayre said, only by the joint and cooperative effort of all nations and peoples who believe in human brotherhood.

Communications In Mine Dispute

Roosevelt

The text of the telegram President Roosevelt sent Thursday to John L. Lewis and Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers, ordering the idle soft coal miners to work, follows:

The controversy between the United Mine Workers of America and the operators of the coal mines has been certified to the National War Labor Board for settlement.

The officials of the United Mine Workers were invited by the board to recommend a person for appointment to the panel charged with investigating the facts. They ignored the invitation. The board then appointed Mr. David B. Robertson of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen to represent the employes; Mr. Walter White to represent the operators, and Mr. Morris L. Cooke to represent the public.

ROOSEVELT

The personnel of this panel assures an impartial investigation of the facts to be used by the board in its determination of the controversy, in accordance with the law.

The officials of the United Mine Workers of America have ignored the request of the board that they present their case to the National War Labor Board panel, and likewise have ignored the request of the board that the strikers be urged to return to their work. I am advised that many thousands of miners are out on strikes and strikes are threatened at many other mines which now are in operation.

The procedure that has been followed in this case by the board is, I am assured, in exact accord with that followed in all other controversies of this character.

In view of the statements made in telegrams to me from some members of the United Mine Workers that OPA price regulations have been disregarded and that the cost of living has gone up disproportionately in mining areas, I have directed OPA to make an immediate investigation of the facts and wherever a violation of the law is disclosed by that investigation, to see that the violators of the law are prosecuted.

The strikes and stoppages in the coal industry that have occurred and are threatened are in clear violation of the "no strike" pledge.

These are not mere strikes against employers of this industry to enforce collective bargaining demands. They are strikes against the United States Government itself.

These strikes are a direct interference with the prosecution of the war. They challenge the governmental machinery that has been set up for the orderly and peaceful settlement of all labor disputes. They challenge the power of the Government to carry on the war.

The continuance and spread of these strikes would have the same effect on the course of the war as a crippling defeat in the field.

The production of coal must continue. Without coal our war industries cannot produce tanks, guns and ammunition for our Armed Forces. Without these weapons our sailors on the high seas and our Armies in the field will be helpless against our enemies.

I am sure that the men who work in the coal mines, whose sons and brothers are in the Armed Forces, do not want to retard the war effort to which they have contributed so loyally and in which they, with all other Americans, have so much at stake.

Not as President, not as Commander in Chief, but as the friend of the men who work in the coal mines, I appeal to them to resume work immediately and submit their case to the National War Labor Board for final determination.

I have confidence in the patriotism of the miners. I am sure that when they realize the effect that stopping work at this time will have upon our boys at the front, they will return to their jobs.

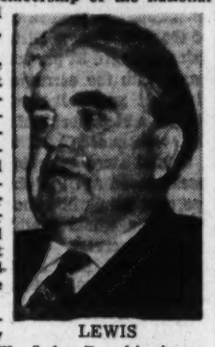

The enemy will not wait while strikes and stoppages run their course. Therefore, if work at the mines is not resumed by 10 o'clock Saturday morning, I shall use all the power vested in me as President and as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy to protect the national interest and to prevent further interference with the successful prosecution of the war.

Lewis

The reply of the mine union officials, sent to President Roosevelt yesterday, follows:

The President,
The White House,
Washington.

Sir: Your telegram of April 29 addressed to the president and secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, respectively, was received and considered by the full membership of the national policy committee, United Mine Workers of America, this morning.

LEWIS

The policy committee would respectfully point out that we have repeatedly, since joint negotiations with the bituminous coal operators began here March 10, stated the reason for our disinclination to submit our case to the National War Labor Board. We have had good reason to feel that the War Labor Board had prejudiced the case of the American coal miners.

That conviction is confirmed beyond doubt by the fact that the National War Labor Board is circumscribed and prevented from making a decision upon the basis of equity and justice by the policy of restricting every decision to the basis of the "Little Steel" formula.

Clearly then the War Labor Board would and could not do other than to apply its fixed mathematical measuring device to the existing wage structure of the bituminous coal industry, and deny our every request. We maintain that such a conclusive action conceivably would not be a decision based upon the equities of the miners' case. Admittedly it is in contravention of the very principles of equity and justice upon which American justice is predicated and which make of our courts the great, free institutions they are.

It turns a deaf ear to the pleas of a half million of America's finest industrial soldiers, and their several million dependent wives and children who daily find their living standards being lowered to the point of despair by mounting prices of foodstuffs and the essentials of life.

These American coal miners are good Americans. More than 75,000 of their number are scattered among the far-flung battlefields of the world in the armed services of their country. Those at home daily descend into the deep recesses of the earth to mine the coal that keeps our great war industry moving. They have shattered all coal production records and not only mined enough coal to meet the needs of American war industry, but have already built the storage piles of bituminous coal to the highest level in the history of the industry.

They have done all this, and more, not so much as their patriotic duty as their right in the American heritage that is theirs; the right by which they ask a just determination of their case upon the equities involved rather than by application of a pre-fixed rule; the American right for which their sons and brothers are bleeding and dying on the fields of battle, the same right for which they, too, will gladly give their lives if need be.

We want an agreement. We want to work. The bituminous coal operators have willfully blocked the making of an agreement. We respectfully advise that in our judgment the making of an agreement through a renewal of collective bargaining is the logical means of providing justice and equity to all parties.

Last year, some 650 million tons of anthracite and bituminous coal were produced. This year we expect to produce well over 700 million tons of anthracite and bituminous coal. This is being done with depleted labor force—depleted by the call of our armed services and the call of higher pay in adjacent war industries.

This record has not been surpassed by any other industry. On this record of patriotic service the mine workers believe they are entitled to receive just, equitable and fair consideration.

Respectfully submitted,

International Policy Committee of the United Mine Workers of America, by:

John L. Lewis, president; John O'Leary, vice president, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer.

tector of your savings, your insurance policy, bought for the benefits of your old age and your dependents. We aim to preserve the value of the bonds of your Government so that the dollars you now loan your Government will have the same value when they are returned to you as they now have.

We do not mind the criticism, often very bitter. We expect it. We cut across the family life of every one in the Nation. We have the thankless task of saying to the farmer, manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer that their prices cannot exceed fixed limits. We necessarily reach into the complicated and intricate structure of business with fixed and arbitrary rules. It is not surprising that we are resented by those we control. Every day under normal conditions in good times and bad times there are business casualties and failures. Now these are blamed on the Office of Price Administration. Actually, business casualties are today lower than in a generation. Your Government needs your support in this critical hour.

The simple truth of the matter is that this office is holding as nearly as humanly possible to the principle of the Stabilization Act of last fall. Our answer to those who assert that we are not holding the cost of living line is that wages in industry, factory and mine have risen amply and sufficiently to cover the inevitable rises in the level of living costs. There is no justification for breaking the stabilization program. Let the American people join us in holding the line.

Wheeler Ponders Amendment to Exempt Fathers

Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, yesterday said he was considering offering as an amendment to the Connally plant-seizure bill, slated for Senate debate Monday, his measure to give draft exemption to all fathers married prior to December 8, 1941.

The bill of Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, would give President Roosevelt specific authority to seize struck coal mines and was given the right-of-way to the Senate floor Thursday as the President served an ultimatum on United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis to send his miners back to work.

Connally's bill would amend the Selective Service Act and thus is open to amendment by any other measure, such as the Wheeler bill, which was introduced as an amendment to the act.

Transport Pilot's Duties Bore Ex-Flying Tiger

Miami, Fla., April 30 (AP).—Robert Raines, former "Flying Tiger" now ferrying cargo and soldiers from India to China, is bored with the peaceful life of a transport pilot. He plans to seek action with the Marines.

Raines, of Reno, Nev., returned to the United States yesterday to recuperate from malaria.

"They treat me mighty well out there," he said. "But it's boring. I haven't seen a Jap plane since I joined up with the China National Aviation Corp. last August. I have about decided to join the Marines. I'm getting tired of flying transport planes."

Raines joined the American Volunteer Group in August, 1941, and is officially credited with downing six Jap planes, plus nine other "probables."

The Gallup Poll

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., April 30.—Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota left the Governor's chair this week to join the Navy, carrying with him the political goodwill of the great majority of Minnesota voters.

Often mentioned as a Republican presidential candidate for 1944, Governor Stassen was considered an outstanding or better-than-average Governor by nearly six out of every ten Minnesotans as he donned his naval uniform on Wednesday.

An even larger number of his fellow Minnesotans looked upon him favorably as a Republican candidate for the presidency.

Throughout Minnesota interviewers for the institute asked voters recently:

"What kind of job would you say Governor Stassen is doing?"

The results were:

Outstanding	45%
Better than average	12
Average	34
Poor	5
No Opinion	4

From time to time in recent months the institute has also sounded the opinions of the people of Minnesota as well as the rest of the country to determine how many look favorably or unfavorably upon Governor Stassen as presidential material for 1944.

Ballots gathered from Minnesota show the following attitude among voters in all parties combined:

Favorable	62%
Unfavorable	29
No Opinion	9

Surveys have indicated, however, that outside of Minnesota and surrounding States, Governor Stassen is not well known with the rank and file of voters.

Among Republicans polled throughout the country, for example, the institute found in March that more than half were not familiar enough with Governor Stassen to give an opinion one way or the other about him as a presidential candidate.

His stepping out of the public eye will, from a strictly political point of view, lessen his chances to overcome the handicap of being relatively unknown to the mass of voters.

However, among those Republican voters who are familiar enough with him at this time to offer an opinion, the ratio of favorable to unfavorable is 3 to 1, as the following table shows:

Republicans Only Throughout United States.
Favorable	31%
Unfamiliar or No Opinion	59

Farm Labor Plan Inaugurated To Hire 3,500,000 Crop Corps

By Ovid A. Martin

Associated Press Staff Writer

Armed with a special appropriation of $26,100,000, Food Administrator Chester C. Davis inaugurated yesterday a broad program designed to provide farmers with sufficient labor to produce a record supply of food.

The program calls for the enlistment of a United States corps of 3,500,000, including urban men, women and boys for full-time and part-time work, and the importation of up to 65,000 foreign agricultural workers for placement on farms.

President Roosevelt cleared the way for action yesterday by signing a deficiency appropriation bill providing the funds. Most of the money will be used to provide transportation and shelter of workers employed away from home. The workers themselves will be paid by farmers.

The farm labor program will be directed by Lieut. Col. Lewis Taylor, deputy food administrator. Under Taylor will be M. L. Wilson, director of the Agriculture Department's extension service, and Col. Phillip G. Bruton. Both Taylor and Bruton have been lent to Davis by the War Department.

Wilson will be responsible for mobilizing and placing of farm labor for use within each State, Bruton for the supply and distribution of foreign labor and domestic workers moved from one State to another. In providing transportation and housing for foreign workers and domestic workers moved from one State to another, Bruton will use facilities and personnel of the Farm Security Administration.

Davis said considerable progress has been made towards solving the farm labor problem. He reported that the Selective Service System had deferred 1,012,302 farm workers between last November and April 15, and estimated that by the end of 1943 a total of 3,000,000 such workers will have been deferred.

The food administrator said the War Manpower Commission regulations issued under President Roosevelt's recent hold-the-line order are expected to slow down migration of workers from farms to better paying urban jobs. Those regulations restrict persons engaged in farming taking other work if the only purpose of the move is to accept more pay.

viction that farmers, like workers and all the rest of us, having nothing to gain from such a race, and must, indeed, lose everything."

Defense of OPA

Brown concluded his talk with a vigorous defense of OPA:

"The simple truth of the matter is that this office is holding as nearly as humanly possible to the principle of the stabilization act of last fall. Our answer to those who assert that we are not holding the cost of living line is that wages in industry, factory, and mine have risen amply and sufficiently to cover the inevitable rises in the level of living costs. There is no justification for breaking the stabilization program. Let the American people join us in holding the line."

Brown did not explain how he hoped to accomplish the promised roll-back in prices, although it is believed that expansion of the program for specific ceiling prices will give him the opportunity to order lower prices. Also, his address forecast a new effort by the administration to place ceilings on agricultural commodities—livestock, hogs, cotton, milk for manufacturing purposes, etc.

'Honor System' Out

The emphasis on price enforcement marked somewhat of a change in policy for Brown, who was known to have placed considerable reliance on so-called voluntary compliance and the "honor system."

The price administrator also appealed to consumers to help him enforce the new ceilings.

"In a short time, you will know the legal price for practically all food you buy," Brown said. "If you pay a higher price, you are a law violator. If you are charged a higher price, the seller is a law violator . . . You can enforce price control if you refuse to pay the price above those established by law.

"The claimed justification for this (coal) strike would fade entirely, if every American coal miner and housewife would make and keep this simple pledge, 'I will not pay one cent above the legal price.'"

Brown asserted that the "coal miners cannot better their position in a race between wages and the cost of living."

"Coal miners are earning today far more than they earned at the time war broke out," he said.

Acknowledging that the full cost of living increase was not reflected in Bureau of Labor Statistics figures, Brown stated that the weekly wages of the coal miner "will buy 25 per cent more goods today than in the summer of 1939." Brown pointed out that the miners are now working full time, while three years ago they suffered short weeks and frequent layoffs.

Transfer of 300 Veterans' Positions To N. Y. Approved

In order to provide more space for the expanding activities of the Veterans Administration, approval of a proposal to transfer 300 positions in National Service Life Insurance to New York City was given yesterday by Harold D. Smith, director of the bureau of the budget.

The transfer had been proposed by General Frank T. Hines, administrator of Veterans Affairs, Veterans Administration, and includes such activities as coding, beneficiary changes and correspondence. Previous decentralization moves of the administration involved insurance and finance branches.

The transfer will be completed as soon as space for occupancy is available. Additional space will be leased in the old New York Life Insurance Building, 346 Broadway, where the other decentralized groups of the agency are now housed. Some of the 300 positions to be removed will be filled by recruiting employes in New York, according to present plans.

The eighth class of the Washington Police Academy graduated last night at exercises at the new Interior Department auditorium while a brass band, jugglers and a magnician entertained.

Organized nearly two years ago after a Police Department reorganization, the academy provides a 6-week course in scientific crime detection, law and procedure. The school is under the direction of Capt. John H. Fowler.

Commencement exercises for the present class were moved from the Police Headquarters roll call room to the larger accommodations because of the increased interest of civic leaders. The school has progressed to a point where it is considered one of the best of its kind in the country.

Speakers at the ceremonies included Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, his assistant, Inspector Harvey G. Callahan, the three District Commissioners, Harry S. Wender, president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, and William E. Leahy, District director of selective service.

Those who received certificates include Lieuts. Chester C. Gouldman, Loraine T. Johnson and Charles T. Warder, Detective Sergt. James P. Tolson; Sergts. Shirley R. Collins, George S. Eckels, Ernest A. Fuller, Joseph T. Kirby, Jack R. Milstead and Sylvester E. Steinman, Precinct Detectives Pearl Pythian and Roland Valentine.

Many Flowers, Few Maypoles Expected Here

May Day observers will see a minimum of the traditional maypoles about the District today, but they'll find a maximum of the flowers that bloom in the spring through the Capital's parks.

Nature-loving newcomers to Washington, who aren't quite sure where to take their May Day jaunts and what to look for, are informed by Irving C. Root, superintendent of parks, that, at Dumbarton Oaks Park, for instance, is a display of primroses in a variety of colors, not to mention azalea, scillia, narcissus, double-flowering oriental cherries, buttercups, bluebells, trillium and several other wildflowers. Several of the ferns for which Dumbarton Oaks is noted are beginning to unfold, all against a background of flowering dogwood and redbud trees. These trees are also in full bloom over the rambling acres of Rock Creek Park.

Blaze of Color

A blaze of color, Meridian Hill Park offers azaleas, dogwoods, periwinkle, violets and other spring varieties, while the West Potomac Park pansy garden features its annual million-bloom display.

Then there are the blooms at Fort Dupont Park, the towpath of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, the Glover-Archbold, Foundry Branch and Soapstone Valley Parkways, Memorial Grove south of the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool, Brentwood Park and the Kenilworth Aquatic Gardens.

District youngsters, under the auspices of the District Recreation Department, will hike from playgrounds to suburban areas for annual May Day picnics.

Wreck Blocks Traffic

Norfolk, Va., April 30 (AP).—The Ledger-Dispatch said it had a report that 15 cars of an Atlantic Coast Line freight train were derailed this afternoon at Enfield, N. C. The cause of the derailment was not given but it was said no one was injured seriously. Traffic was blocked, however.

Service Party Ends Year For Canteen

The National Press Club Canteen will climax a year of service to the servicemen today at 2 p. m. when Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox will greet men in uniform at the last party of the season.

Servicemen are also invited to attend a "get-acquainted" dance today at 9 p. m. in the hall of St. Francis Xavier Parish, 2700 O Street Southeast.

Other activities scheduled for servicemen in the District this weekend include:

Capital Sales Spurt 27% on Easter Buying

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Easter buying rush brought a 27 per cent increase in Washington department store sales in the week ended April 24, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

The spurt here, however, was somewhat less than in other parts of the fifth Reserve District where gains averaged 32 per cent as compared with the corresponding period last year. Baltimore stores showed a 34 per cent sales spurt in the week ended April 24.

Capital store sales in the four weeks ended April 24 showed a 11 per cent gain while the fifth district as a whole exhibited a 15 per cent increase.

Meanwhile, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., in its weekly trade survey reported yesterday that the usual letdown in sales after the Easter rush was less pronounced than usual. Dollar volume was reported about 7 to 13 per cent higher than in the like 1942 period.

"With demand holding firm and stocks low or in some instances sold out," the business research organization said, "post-Easter clearance sales were not being featured throughout the country and retailers were turning to promotion of new summer lines."

"Home furnishings sold well because of warm weather. Canning supplies were leading sellers and shoppers showed interest in cleaning items for spring housecleaning. Gift shops reported good business.

"Women's apparel sales fell off slightly but continued to hold a high position after the Easter holiday rush with demand noted also for clothing accessories."

Nats Beat Yanks in 10th, 2-1; Clary, Johnson Star

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The Derby will be run today in about the time it takes a person to launch and recover from a good, long sneeze. About two minutes and three seconds, give or take a couple of fractions. No other sports event compresses such high excitement into such a short time.

POVICH

No other event rushes toward such a rapid climax, but actually the Kentucky Derby suspense begins almost a year before the race—when the 2-year-olds are running in the eliminations. The build-up commences when the better 2-year-olds begin to draw away from the common crop and their owners start to vision their colors in the Derby.

The running of the Derby begins, in a sense, with dawn on Derby Day, at least for the folks who are in Louisville. It's the only topic of the town. No other race starts until the horses leave the barrier, but the Derby begins to get in its wallop when the horses come out of the track and parade to the post to the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home." For the sentimentalists watching the starters moving postward, nose to tail and tail to nose, as the band strikes up Kentucky's own song, the running of the race borders on an anticlimax.

At the Derby, it's possible to sop up your big thrill before the race is run. It's a tribute to the Derby. Such anticipation must be deserved.

Some of the best pre-Derby stories are the experiences of folks who managed to get to Louisville despite the Office of Defense Transportation ukase against traveling to the Derby from afar.

No railroad was permitted to sell a ticket to Louisville in the week before Derby Day, unless the purchaser could show urgent business there other than the race. One chap relates how he made it from New York to Derbytown.

He bought a ticket to Cincinnati, but from that point he was refused transportation to Louisville by the railroad ticket office. He was told, however, he could not be prevented from getting onto the Louisville train without a ticket and pay his fare in cash. The conductor refused to accept a cash fare to Louisville, but gave the fellow receipt for the fare to the city of Elizabethtown, 50 miles farther along the line.

That worked out excellently for the Derby-bound fan, who bought a ticket for 50 miles beyond Louisville and merely got off the train when it stopped at the Louisville depot.

One of the pleasantly surprising items about the Washington baseball club has been the sudden transformation in the fielding of Johnny Sullivan, the club's rookie shortstop.

Sullivan last season was no treat to watch. He was uncertain on ground balls, more uncertain in his throwing. He failed to get throws away with any rapidity, and overanxiety was written all over his fielding. You wouldn't recognize Sullivan as the same lad this year.

Ever since the 1943 season started, Sullivan has been fielding with an easy grace. He has been sure-handed on ground balls, and his throwing has been superb.

Sullivan's speed is not his least value to the Nats, incidentally. They were discussing the sprinting ability of the rookie shortstop in the Nats' dressing room the other day, after he had beaten out an infield hit. "There's only one right-handed hitter in the league who gets down to first base quicker than Sullivan," declared Coach Clyde Milan, "and he's George Case."

It was Ladies Day at Griffith Stadium yesterday, recalling the best Ladies Day story we know. It is told by the ball park concessionaire who vows the truth of it.

"I saw a women walking excitedly up and down the runways and apparently looking for something. I tried to be helpful and asked her if I could be of any service. I blinked when she asked:

"'Where is the seventh inning?'

"'Madame,' I said, 'will you repeat that question?'

"'I'm looking for the seventh inning,' she said, I must find it. My husband is coming out to the park, and he told me to meet him at the seventh inning.'"

Riverland and Attention Favored in Dixie 'Cap Today

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 30.—A field of nine distance stars was named today to contest the $20,000-added Dixie Handicap, which will feature the racing program at Pimlico tomorrow, with chief early support centering on Riverland and Attention, two of the steadiest performers in the handicap ranks.

These two members of the We-Beat-Whirlaway Club will carry top weight of 123 pounds each in the fortieth renewal of the mile and three-sixteenths Dixie. Riverland, racing for the Louisiana Farm Stables of Harold A. Clark, will be ridden by Steve Brooks.

Georgie (The Iceman) Woolf will have the mount on Attention, the Equipoise son now racing in the silks of Trainer Max Hirsch, who leased him from the Mrs. Parker Corning estate.

Attention ran second in the 1942 renewal of the Dixie, which produced one of the most thrilling contests of the Maryland Racing Years as Whirlaway came blazing down the stretch to win the major share of the purse. Charles S. Howard's Mioland, also named to run tomorrow, was third.

Mioland is weighted just 1 pound under Attention and Riverland, with 122 pounds, including Jockey Wayne Wright.

Others named overnight to contest tomorrow's Dixie were A. J. Sackett's Tola Rose, also trained by Hirsch and carrying 111 pounds; Hal Price Headley's Anticlimax, 113, and Equinox, 104; Hazel M. Babylon's Abbe Pierre, 107; Greentree Stable's Corydon, 107; and Mrs. Ray Feinberg's Firebroom, 113.

Attention and Riverland have not met before, the former having been retired last season after his third-place finish in the Massachusetts Handicap on July 15.

Ocean Wave Given Workout With Legs Bandaged; May Not Face the Barrier

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Writer

Louisville, Ky., April 30.—In turf parlance, Count Fleet is something good to eat in the sixty-ninth running of the Kentucky Derby come tomorrow. If he fails many a man won't eat and not because he won't have his No. 2 ration book. Here in the Blue Grass tonight there's hardly a man, woman or child who will tell you that Count Fleet isn't a lock and the turf experts—they will be writing their Derby stories in their undershirts if "The Fleet ain't in."

Taxicabs have been barred from Churchill Downs this year, but there will be plenty of taxi money around for Mrs. John D. Hertz, whose husband runs a fleet of cabs in Chicago, owns "The Fleet with four feet" that everybody and his poor relations believes will make port tomorrow with the gold and glory that goes with victory in this classic.

If Count Fleet is sunk—and after all, they have to run around the track—the consensus is that Chicago baking powder will supply the explosive in the form of the Calumet Farm's Ocean Wave. But, at this writing less than 24 hours before post time, there is a

Champs Get But 4 Hits Off Leonard

Yankees Fail in Try To Set Up Double Play Situation as Johnson Hits Safely

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

The two extremes in the Nats' batting order, pint-sized Ellis Clary and massive Bob Johnson teamed up excellently in the tenth inning yesterday on behalf of the Washington club and 8000 ladies' day fans. The result: Nats, 2; Yanks, 1.

Little Clary and Big Johnson contrived to get the winning run home for Dutch Leonard, who had been a pretty skillful sort himself all afternoon. Leonard was choking off the Yankees with four hits, but he had no better than a 1-1 tie with Hank Borowy going into the last of the tenth.

If you like the guy who can lead off the tenth inning of a 1-1 game with a two-bagger, Clary is your hero, because that's what he did. But if you prefer the chap who breaks up the ball game, Bob Johnson is your man.

Got Sixth of Year

Clary, who has developed a passion for two-baggers this season, collected his sixth of the year when he lined one of Borowy's pitches far into left field to set the scenery for the Nats' victory.

There was some slight embarrassment written on the face of Manager Ossie Bluege before the Nats won the ball game, however. After Clary's blow, Bluege distained the conventional sacrifice bunt, and Gene Moore whacked a fly ball to Weatherly that tethered Clary to second. The Yanks ordered Stan Spence walked to set up a double-play situation, and that's where Johnson came in.

Johnson swung at the second pitch he saw, the first one he liked, and Clary crossed the plate looking over his shoulder, as Johnson's solid single to center gave him license to run.

It was a sweet victory for Leonard, against the club that had handed him one-third of the 57 defeats of his five-year career with the Nats. He out pitched Borowy, who gave up seven hits to the Nats in contrast to the Yankees four. Leonard had superb control of his knuckle ball, walking only the first batter to face him.

Amazing Streak Ends

The one run the Yankees did score interrupted an amazing streak by Washington pitchers. When Charley Keller tripled into right-center with one out in the fourth and scored on Gordon's long fly to Johnson to tie the game at 1-1, it was the first earned run off a Washington hurler in 55 innings.

The Nats clipped Borowy for a run in the second inning to take a 1-to-0 lead. Mickey Vernon and Jake Early were the moving forces. Vernon led off with a solid swat into center for a single and, after Priddy sacrificed, Early got the run home with another single to center.

Leonard scattered the Yankees' four hits one to an inning. Keller's three-bagger was the only blow heftier than a single. The Nats threw up a double-play defense be-

Armstrong T.K.O.s Turiello in 5 Rounds

'Hammer' Floors Rival Four Times; 8600 Crowd Pays $19,056 to Watch

By Al Costello

Post Staff Writer

Henry Armstrong used his famed "hammer" only sparingly last night at Uline Arena, but at that it only took "L'il Perpetual Motion" until 1:44 of the fifth round before scoring a technical kayo over Saverio Turiello, New York Italian, whom he had once before defeated in four rounds on the West Coast.

A crowd of 8600, which was 150 less than absolute capacity, screamed its delight as "The Hammer" came up with his seventeenth victory in 20 starts since hitting the comeback trail. The gross gate was $19,056.95.

Four times did Henry put the game Italian on the deck before Referee Eddie LaFond stopped it. Once, in the fourth, Henry unloosed his "hammer" in overland style which caught Saverio flush on the chin. Saverio took nine, came up and was glad to hear the bell as "The Hammer" moved in for what would have been the kill.

And then, in the fifth and final round, "The Hammer" really went to work. He clubbed Saverio into the ropes and down he went for no count. Then, with a beautiful left hook to the face, he put Turiello on the floor for a five count. Hardly had Saverio staggered to his feet than Armstrong again cut loose with the hammering right and when the Italian sank to the canvas, LaFond stepped in and halted the uneven affair.

For three rounds, Saverio was fighting Henry a pretty even fight, but it did not appear as if he was punching with the same authority that he used in drills here all during the week. Either that, or Armstrong was shaking off the punches without feeling them.

All the while, "L'il Perpetual

Ray Robinson Kayoes Cabral In First Round

By International News Service

Boston, April 30.—Pvt. Ray (Sugar) Robinson, U. S. A., knocked out Freddy Cabral of Cambridge tonight in the first round of a scheduled 10-round feature B. B. A. bout at the Boston Garden.

The knockout came at 2:30 of the first round when Cabral worked in close on the tall, lean Negro and then started an attack to the head. Robinson smashed four hard lefts into the Cambridge boy's stomach and Cabral went to the floor for the count.

It was several seconds before Cabral could be brought back to consciousness.

"Sugar" Robinson weighed 148 pounds and Cabral weighed 151 pounds. The boys fought before a slim house of 5655 fans.

On the same card, George (Red) Doty, of Hartford, scored a technical victory over Phil Norman, of Detroit, Mich. Norman was out on his feet in the third round and attempted to put up his hands in surrender when he was hit with a smashing stomach punch. The referee gave the bout to "Red."

Great Lakes Wins, 8-3, Over Notre Dame

By the Associated Press

Great Lakes, Ill., April 30.—The Great Lakes Naval Training Station today opened its 1943 home season by defeating the University of Notre Dame 8 to 3 before 10,000 recruits.

It was the second straight victory for Lieut. Mickey Cochrane's Bluejackets, who last Sunday beat the Louisville Colonels in their season opener.

Glen McQuillen, former St. Louis Browns outfielder, led the sailors at the plate with a double and a single. He also scored two runs. Tom Sheehan, Notre Dame catcher, accounted for one of the Irish runs with a homer in the sixth inning off Bob Harris, former Philadelphia Athletics pitcher.

Vern Olsen, former Chicago Cub hurler, started for the Bluejackets and worked three innings, yielding one run and three hits. He was followed by Harris and Tom Forrick, former Cleveland Indian, who replaced Harris in the seventh.

Jamaica 'Cap Has Top-Notch Speed Entries

By the Associated Press

New York, April 30.—There's no purse to match the $75,000 Kentucky Derby or the $20,000 Dixie Handicap at Pimlico but Jamaica figures to have a pretty good horse race tomorrow when 15 sprinters match strides in the six furlongs of the $5000 Jamaica Handicap.

Among the overnight field are some of the best sprinters uncovered this season on the Metropolitan track. They are Mrs. Tilyou Christopher's Doublrab, champion dash horse of 1942 and top weight in tomorrow's list under 130 pounds; William Woodward's Apache, Mrs. Josephine Grimes' With Regards, Victor Emanuel's mud-loving Omission and George D. Widener's Overdrawn, winner of the handicap the last two years.

Crosetti Leaves California to Join Yankees

By the Associated Press

Stockton, Calif., April 30.—Frankie Crosetti will be showing up in Yankee Stadium in a day or so, to start his twelfth season in major league baseball.

Friends disclosed today that the veteran infielder of the New York Yankees hopped into an automobile Tuesday morning and headed alone for New York.

Crosetti recently came to terms with the Yankees over his 1943 salary, but he will not be eligible to play until May 21—30 days after the start of the season. This was the consequence of a suspension by Judge Kenesaw Landis, the penalty for an altercation Frankie had with an umpire in the 1942 World Series.

15 at Pimlico Are Violators Of 'Honor Ban'

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 30.—The enforcement division of the Office of Price Administration reported today that 15 persons had been detected at the Pimlico Race Track as violators of the "honor ban" on pleasure driving.

OPA said the 15 suspects had been seen at the track three or more times since the event began.

Cornelius P. Mundy, chief enforcement attorney for the Maryland OPA staff, said agents had checked automobiles parked at the track every day.

Letters will be sent to the suspects, Mundy added, asking them to explain the reason for driving their car to the tracks so many times. Mundy explained that the OPA would take appropriate action if the answers were not satisfactory.

The enforcement chief asserted that it was not illegal to use the A ration for this purpose, but added that a motorist could hardly make more than one trip on this allotment. Several B and C stickers were on some of the vehicles reported.

Royal Flush Shows Power and Wins Regret Purse at Pimlico

Filly Held Factor in The Oaks

By Palmer Heagerty
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., April 30.—Vincent Cicero, sr.'s Royal Flush, a 3-year-old filly which was seen in action on the smaller circuits during last year, qualified handsomely for the Pimlico Oaks here next week when she led from end to end today while scoring by a length and one-half in the mile-and-70-yard Regret, serving as a testing block for eight eligibles for the coming filly stake.

Slightly neglected by the crowd of 8000, Royal Flush was allowed to go to the post as an $18.90 chance but this failed to dampen the spirits of Jockey Porter Roberts as he brought the daughter of Knave High over the distance in 1:44 over a fast track. La Reigh, from the barn of A. Pelleteri, was second, a length and one-half before H. P. Headley's Who Me. Too Timely, the public choice, was off last in the field, but managed to make up enough ground to be third.

Has Proved Worth

Although she only accounted for three races last year, Royal Flush proved her worth here the other day when she came from well back to be second to Cream in a fast-run three-quarter-mile race. Despite the fact that the win was worth only $1400 today, it put her in a position to take down top money in the $10,000 added Oaks.

Walter Wickes' Valpuiseaux, a 10-year-old jumper, which seems to wait for the Pimlico meeting to win his purses each year, selected today's opening race for his victorious effort when he came from off a slow pace to be an easy winner by sime six lengths. Well handled by W. Gallaher, Valpuiseaux assumed command when asked after a turn of the field and then drew out to hang up the time of 3:56 1-5. Meeting House, claimed out of his last race by T. T. Mott, was easily second over Bay Dean, choice in the seven-horse field traveling the about 2-mile course. The winner, beaten some 30 lengths in his only previous outing this year, was sent postward at odds of $27 for $2.

1943 Derby Wins Name of 'The Derby of Utter Confusion' After Mixup on Entry List

By a Staff Correspondent

Louisville, Ky., April 30.—In recent years the press box boys have been designating Kentucky Derbies by names . . . There was the "Periscope Derby" when vendors did a wholesale business selling these gadgets . . . The "Peach Basket Derby" also got its name through customers trying to look-see and the same went for the "Ladder Derby" when a buck and a half got the customer a miniature flight of stairs. Then there was the "Rubber Hose Derby" at which the State Militia took charge armed with rubber billies . . . Tomorrow's Derby started out to be the "Street Car Derby" but today it was rightfully tagged "The Derby of Utter Confusion."

As if battles with the ODT, OPA, ABC and PDQ weren't bad enough and as if uncertainties about injuries to Count Fleet and Ocean Wave weren't perplexing enough, the racing secretary's office had to go berserk this morning . . . Scribes for press services and local papers, who have haunted barns for weeks trying to predetermine the number of entries, smiled as closing time fo. entries came and they had twelve horses checked, just as they had predicted . . . The boys rushed off their stories on 12 horses entered in Derby.

A half hour later came time to draw for post position. . . . The scribes watched as the pills were dropped into the leather bottle . . . and instead of 12 pills, 13 were put in. . . Some horse had slipped into the field. . . . When the drawings were made the mysterious entry was found to be Seven Hearts. . . . The scribes started a sprint for the telegraph offices and telephones. . . . They sent in corrections "Make the field 13 and add Seven Hearts" and then sat around trying to figure out how they had missed this entry.

An hour later, came the payoff. . . . W. G. Sparks, trainer of Seven Hearts, was asked who would be the jockey. . . . The conditioner was amazed. "The jockey? Why Seven Hearts isn't even entered." . . . It was later learned that entry blanks for all possible starters were filled out and that Seven Hearts' blank was taken up by mistake. . . . Of course the scribes had to rush a correction of the correction, if you know what I mean. . . . Incidentally Seven Hearts was drawn in No. 7 post position. . . . When he was withdrawn horses over that position were moved in a notch.

Walter Kelley, trainer of Blue Swords, drew the sheets for post position and leaped high, yelling gleefully, as he pulled the coveted No. 1 for his own horse. . . . Roy Waldron, trainer of No Wrinkles, kidded Jim Healy, conditioner of Gold Shower, when the latter made his entry. . . . "Rather jittery, aren't you?" said Waldron. "Well, they must think something of my chances because Cameron (trainer of Count Fleet) has a saver with me." A saver, in track parlance, means that the two trainers have an agreement whereby one cuts in for a percentage if the other wins. . . . Eddie (Rochester) Anderson appeared to put in the entry for his much-discussed Burnt Cork. . . . Speaking in his squeaky radio voice, he said, "Burnt Cork was anchored in on the rail in the Derby trial and I expect him to go better if the track is fast." . . . The first horse entered was Bankrupt and that's about what the scribes will be if Count Fleet ain't fleet. . . .

Count Fleet was the last horse entered and Trainer Cameron did the honors.

Rochester is said to have offered Jockey Charley Bierman $10,000 if he could win with Burnt Cork . . . however, the boy left last night for Maryland to ride Anticlimax for his contract employer, Hal Price Headley, in the Dixie Handicap. . . . There is a mint julep shortage here . . . whisky can be bought freely over bars by the drink . . . but by the bottle is a different proposition. . . . They'll slip you a bottle around the corner of the counter for from $8 to $10 a quart. . . . There are predictions that Louisville may be drank dry by tomorrow night. . . . Parking will be permitted for "A" ration-card cars only on the Churchill Downs-owned lots adjacent to the track. . . . But police and OPA have indicated that they haven't enough inspectors to make more than a hit-and-miss check on B and C cards . . . however, there are innumerable parking places in backyards and private lots near the course.

Ocean Wave Not Definite As Starter

slivver of doubt that Warren Wright's pride will face the starter.

Ocean Wave, who tossed white caps in the faces of rivals in the Derby trial, came out of that race with a heel condition that has Trainer Ben Jones guessing. The colt was on the track this morning but only galloped with four bandaged legs. Tomorrow morning, Jones intends to "blow out" the 3-year-old and then will make his decision.

Even before Ocean Wave became a doubtful starter the odds guessers stamped Count Fleet as a 3-to-5 shot. Should Ocean Wave be withdrawn, the Reigh Count colt might open in the betting at 2 to 5, but this writer has a feeling that Count Fleet may pay as much as even money. Although this Derby is supposed to be a local affair, a "street car show," some out-of-towners have slipped in, but not enough to shock the mutuel machines as in other years. I believe that the wagering will turn to a "beat Count Fleet" pitch, with enough deuces, fives and tens going into the pot to "up" the price on "The Fleet."

In all a dozen 3-year-olds were named for the race in overnight entries. There were no surprises when the list closed. The group includes 11 colts and a lone gelding —Mrs. Vera S. Bragg's Gold Shower. This Greenwich, Conn., hope is rated in the second flight of the field, a group that includes Allen T. Simmons' Blue Swords and W. E. Boeing's Slide Rule. The others, and at least two and possibly three, are likely to be scratched, are in the "moon shooters" division. They are Charles T. Fisher's Amber Light, Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' No Wrinkles, Mrs. Henry L. Finch's Modest Lad, J. Warfield Roger's Dove Pie, Townsend B. Martin's Bankrupt, Eddie (Rochester) Anderson's Burnt Cork and W. E. Boeing's Twoses (entry with Slide Rule).

Printer Gets List

The program handicapper gave something of an official touch to predictions. He sent the field to the printers to be posed in this order: Count Fleet as the "zero horse" with the others in this order: Ocean Wave, Blue Swords, Amber Light, Boeing entry, Gold Shower, No Wrinkles, Modest Lad, Dove Pie with the "field" consisting of Burnt Cork and Bankrupt.

With few exceptions the jockeys have been settled. Johnny Longden, as usual, will ride Count Fleet with Wendell Eads aboard Ocean Wave and Ted Atkinson on Blue Swords. Boys for Burnt Cork, Dove Pie and Twoses (if he goes) will be named tomorrow morning.

Trainer Don Cameron is confident that Count Fleet will "walk his beat," as they say on the backstretch. He had the shakes when the Reigh Count colt came out of the Wood Memorial with his foot injury. Now that has cleared up and Cameron says he will have no excuses.

Despite the fact that the field promises to be comparatively large, Count Fleet is not believed to be handicapped. He is not a "come-from-behind" horse. He doesn't have to depend upon a drive from far back to take the main money. He has speed to run with the speed horses and he has punch enough, apparently, to stave off any fast closers.

His chief contenders are horses which are full stretch runners. Ocean Wave, Blue Swords and Slide Rule must make their moves in the late stages, it is the belief. On the other hand, the early speed, in addition to Count Fleet, is packed in Gold Shower, Amber Light and Burnt Cork. It is felt that Longdon will rate Count Fleet close up behind any or all of these three and turn the Hertz star loose when anything moves from the back o. the field. If there are moves of importance, every trainer on the grounds looks for a new Derby record.

Some 15,000 customers saw today's program and old-timers say this indicates tomorrow's crowd will be between 50,000 and 60,000. Today's program was conducted over a fast track. The Derby will be off at 6:30 Washington time.

Here are my Derby selections: Count Fleet, Ocean Wave and Blue Swords. That's going solidly for the chalk but the race just doesn't figure any other way.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VALPUISEAUX, $27.00, $11.40, $6.00; MEETING HOUSE, $7.50, $4.40; BAY DEAN, $2.70.

VALPUISEAUX, showing marked improvement over only previous outing here, fenced faultlessly throughout, took command when asked and was going easily at the end. MEETING HOUSE was held in contending position throughout, moved boldly when asked for best, but was no match for top one. BAY DEAN was hard ridden to stay with MAD POLICY early, assumed lead after a mile but tired thereafter.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 12:30. Off at 12:31. Winner, J. V. Tizani's gr. f. (3) by Jacopo—Royal Chain. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHAIN MISS, $10.40, $5.30, $4.70; SPARKER, $6.00, $4.40; MARE NOSTRUM, $7.60.

CHAIN MISS, well up while going easily through opening half, came between horses to assume command at sixteenth pole and then held SPARKER safe in closing strides. SPARKER was eased back on turn, was in close quarters briefly in early stretch and then came with good courage at the end. MARE NOSTRUM, unable to keep up early, went to outside for stretch run and closed willingly.

Daily Double—VALPUISEAUX and CHAIN MISS paid $249.60

THIRD RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 2-year-old maidens; claiming. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 1:00. Off at 1:01. Winner, Millsdale Stable's dk. b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAGIC HEELS, $4.90, $4.00, $2.90; BANYAN, $9.20, $5.90; DONAVATRA, $4.80.

MAGIC HEELS, off in front but outrun temporarily, came through on rail to again get the lead approaching quarter pole and drew out gradually while well in hand the last eighth. BANYAN improved her position to be second, but was no match for top one. DONAVATRA took lead between calls and then faltered.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:30. Off at 1:31½. Winner, J. H. Louchheim's b, f. (3) by Economic—Mint Dinah. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ECOMINT, $7.80, $5.70, $4.20; LOST AND FOUND, $8.00, $5.40; CHARGE, $3.50.

ECOMINT sprinted into early advantage, was snugged on turn, responded to urging when straightened out and opened good margin to be going easily at the end. LOST AND FOUND raced in nearest pursuit of winner from start but was not good enough. CHARGE, off in a tangle, moved between horses to reach contention but failed to respond to hard urging in stretch.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:00½. Off at 2:00½. Winner, White Hall Plantation's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FARSIGHT, $5.00, $2.70, $2.30; SABOTEUR, $2.70, $2.30; PRECIOUS YEARS, $2.70.

FARSIGHT, closer than usual in early stages, went through on inside to take command nearing half pole, opened long lead soon after and held SABOTEUR safe while under a mild drive. SABOTEUR lacked speed in opening quarter, improved his position steadily and was getting to top one. PRECIOUS YEARS was far out of contention early and caught only tired horses.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $2000. For 3-year-old fillies. Start fair. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:31. Off at 2:31½. Winner, Vincent Cicero, sr.'s ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL FLUSH, $18.90, $6.40, $4.10; LA REIGH, $4.60, $3.50; WHO ME, $7.80.

ROYAL FLUSH was hustled to front at once, set good pace under excellent rating, responded when shaken up in midstretch and held LA REIGH safe. The latter moved nearest leader after opening half but failed to seriously threaten while being hard punished in last quarter. WHO ME, off next to last and outrun early, moved with a bold rush after a half but hung right at the end.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:00½. Off at 3:01½. Winner, Mrs. R. H. Heighe's b. g. (4) by Aethelstan II—In India. Trained by J. W. Mergler. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48⅗.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CALCUTTA, $10.40, $5.00, $3.30; DETROIT BULL, $7.80, $5.10; BASTINADO, $2.90.

CALCUTTA was hustled to front in opening eighth, set pace while being well rated, was hard ridden when challenged in midstretch and outlasted DETROIT BULL. The latter, off slowly and a trifle through first half, found racing room on inside when starting move, was taken to outside to reach leader and then hung. BASTINADO, far back early, was forced to lose many lengths while bettering position and should improve.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:30½. Off at 3:30½. Winner, C. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISRULE, $8.90, $4.00, $3.80; RANGER II, $3.20, $2.70; DULIE, $10.10.

MISRULE, allowed to settle into stride early, circled field to reach contention, took over lead soon after entering stretch and held RANGER II safe. The latter was brought along slowly to stretch, snuck through on rail, but could not overtake leader. DULIE was forced to race between horses throughout.

Wingo and Deck Star in Eastern's 4-3 Win Over G. W. High

Substitute Shortstop Gets Triple

Pohutsky Scatters Eight Hits and Strikes Five Out, Walks One; Granger Is Loser

A pair of substitutes, Tom Wingo and Billy Deck, meant the difference between victory and defeat for Eastern High School yesterday as the Ramblers defeated George Washington High of Alexandria, 4-3, on the Eastern diamond.

Wingo, making his first start for the Tide this season, turned in one of the most brilliant performances seen thus far this year. With no one down in the ninth and the score tied at 3-all, he hit a terrific triple and tallied a moment later on Deck's hit. Prior to this Wingo had scored another run and had quelled a President rally with an unassisted double play, on a great catch.

Stan Pohutsky, making his second start of the week for Eastern, scattered eight hits well over the nine-inning route and was in trouble only in the sixth inning when he was nicked for two of the three President runs. Pohutsky had good control as he only walked one man and sent five down on strikes.

Edsel Martz rapped out two hits to lead the winners at bat. Stan Scherr had three hits, all of which came at crucial points and kept the Presidents in the game.

W. & L. Nine Beats Coolidge By 10-7 Score

A two-run rally in the eighth inning yesterday clinched a 10-7 victory for the Washington and Lee baseballers over Coolidge's Cats on the latter's field. Charley Granger and Doug Drunkenmiller starred for the Generals as the former pitched eight-hit ball to receive credit for the win while the latter had a perfect day at bat with five hits, two of them triples.

Washington and Lee jumped on Coolidge starter, Buck Henry, for four runs in the second and three in the fifth to send him to the showers. Bob Holzberlein took over at this point and pitched good ball for the remaining three frames. He fanned six during his stay on the hill.

Coolidge had two big innings, the third and sixth, in which they sent all their runs across the plate. Granger, however, tightened-up when the Colts got within striking distance and set them back on their heels.

hind Leonard that didn't do the Yanks any good.

Gene Moore put Leonard in jeopardy in the fifth with an indescribable muff of Bill Johnson's easy fly at the start of the inning, but his infield righted that error. On the next pitch Johnny Sullivan grabbed up a fierce grounder off Hemsley's bat and, with Priddy's help, routed it to first on a double play.

When Borowy singled to center in the eighth with one out, Priddy and Sullivan helped Leonard over the hump again, with another rapid-fire double play, this time on a grounder by the fleet George Stirnweiss.

That blow by Lindell in the eighth was the Yankees' last hit. Clary kept the Yanks off base in the tenth with a spectacular one-hand grab of Bill Johnson's grounder, and you know what happened when the Nats went to bat.

Hoya Golfers Meet G.W.U. at Bannockburn

George Washington University golfers will meet Georgetown today at Bannockburn in the first match of the two-match series with the Colonials holding the best chance in recent years to upset the unbeaten Hoyas.

Jack Donohue, the outstanding player on either team who is a senior at Georgetown and has been helping coach the Hoyas, may play his only match of the season in an attempt to strengthen the Hoya line-up.

Georgetown has beaten Loyola, 17½ to ½ in a match using the Nassau scoring system and Western Maryland, 6-0, while G. W. lost, 8-1 to Navy and beat Western Maryland, 5-1 in two starts.

If Donohue does not play, the Hoyas will line up with five local players—Joe Barse, Jim Fitzgerald, George Beuchert, George Rita and Paul Stewart, plus Dick Mulvaney, the Casper, Wyo., city champion.

G. W. has two local boys, Billy Griffin and Billy Brownrigg, as its first two players and otherwise will line up with Bob Groetzinger, captain; Scott Gudmundson, Al Birmingham and Bob Steadman.

The match will be played at 10 a. m. today over Georgetown's home course while the teams will meet in two weeks at Kenwood in a return match. Georgetown, which is not stressing golf this year as in the past, did not lose a point in two matches last year.

Bethesda Wins Ball Game, 9-7

Bethesda-Chevy Chase yesterday won the first of two scheduled baseball games with its traditional rival Montgomery-Blair, 9-7, in a loosely played game on the Baron's field.

George Myers, who won his third straight game and Bethesda's fourth in five starts, pitched a good ball game but was shaded by the performance of Joe Schreider, who struck out 16, allowed only five hits, but lost the game with his own wildness. The Barons had two big innings in which they counted all their runs. In the first they coupled 2 hits and 4 walks for 5 runs, and in the fifth they used a pair of safeties and 3 walks for the remaining 4 scores.

The winners were guilty of eight

War Dogs to Reveal Training Today at Meadowbrook Club

Marines Enter Trio of Bulldogs in 2-Day Show Sponsored by 2 Local Kennel Groups

"Dog Days" are literally in prospect for Washington today and tomorrow as a vast two-day dog show, featuring between 500 and 750 entrants, opens at the Meadowbrook Club show grounds on East-West Highway this morning at 10 o'clock.

The all-breed show of the Old Dominion Kennel Club is scheduled for today, with the National Capital Kennel Club taking over to sponsor a similar affair tomorrow.

An added attraction today will be the second Specialty Show of the Potomac Boxer Club, which is being held in conjunction with the Old Dominion Kennel Club exhibit.

Proceeds from the entire show are, very appropriately, being delegated to the Dogs for Defense Fund.

Coast guardsmen under the direction of Capt. Raymond J. Mauerman will work war service dogs each day of the show to demonstrate the canine's effectiveness in the war effort.

A number of servicemen have entered dogs in the various breeds and classes, and a large turnout of men in uniform is expected.

A trio of bulldogs—Guadalcanal Rex, Jiggs of the Third Company and Cueball—will rate Marine Corps escorts while making their bids for the blue.

Local kennels will be well represented in the large entry list, which includes a number of dogs from other cities.

Entries for judging need not be registered dogs, nor need the pedigree be known. However, the dog must be pure-bred and more than 6 months of age.

The Boxer Specialty Show today will present entrants from as far away as Connecticut and New Jersey. Enthusiasts of the breed are assured of expert judging, having secured John Phelps Wagner of Milwaukee for the role. Author of what is recognized as the most authoritative text on Boxers, Mr. Wagner is, in addition, owner of the world's most extensive Boxer kennel.

Indians Defeat A.U. at Net

The William and Mary Indians yesterday were extended to the final doubles set to send a fighting American University tennis team down to defeat, 5—4, in one of the best tennis matches seen here this year. The match was played on the Eagles' courts.

With the score knotted at 4-all, King and Matthews of the Indians, and Miller and Hossick of American, waged a terrific duel to decide the match. The eventual winners' team won the first set 6—4 but the A. U. duo rallied to win the second set handily, 6—2. The final set was even closer than the preceding pair and was finally won by William and Mary, 8—6. The Eagles had dropped the first three singles matches but took the final trio to tie the count at the completion of the singles.

Loyola of Baltimore will come here this afternoon for a match in the Mason-Dixon Conference. If the Eagles emerge victorious they will virtually have the championship in the bag.

The results:

SINGLES—Baumann (W&M) defeated Miller, 6—0, 6—3; King (W&M) defeated Nulsen, 6—0, 6—4; Matthews (W&M) defeated Manchester, 6—3, 6—3; Hossick (AU) defeated Coleman, 6—1, 6—0; Doolittle (AU) defeated Claudon, 6—0, 6—2; Fugler (AU) defeated Schneidemann, 6—1, 6—3.

DOUBLES—King-Matthews (W&M) defeated Miller-Hossick, 6—4, 2—6, 8—6; Baumann-Claudon (W&M) defeated Nulsen-Fugler, 6—4, 6—1; Manchester-Doolittle (AU) defeated Horwitz-Gillis, 6—1, 6—1.

Motion" was just that. In that familiar Armstrong style, he kept coming in, weaving and bobbing at every step with never a let-up. The only difference that could be noticed was that he did not throw punches every minute as did the Armstrong of old.

And then, too, for the first three rounds, Armstrong was content to move along without worry. He had tested Turiello's punches before and evidently knew they would not sting. To say he was warming up may be stretching a point, but nevertheless, during those first three heats, Turiello looked very, very good. And then Henry went to work.

"The Hammer" is still a great piece of fighting machinery, especially against an opponent who, like Turiello, would stand up and trade punches with him. Turiello tried to fight a smart fight by letting Armstrong do most of the leading and then stepping in and counter punching. At other times, he tried to lead, but when he went into the infighting department he was fighting one of the game's masters.

At one particular time, during the fourth round, just before Armstrong threw his "hammer" that floored Turiello, Saverio managed to work Henry into a corner and started whaling away to the stomach. Almost before anyone realized it, Henry had worked his way out and, before Turiello knew what was coming off, had Turiello backed against the ropes and started a barrage to the midsection of his own that Turiello definitely did not like. This happened just before the Hammer shot home his overhead right that floored Turiello for the first time.

As a fight, it was interesting, fast and gave the spectators a bang. But as a contest, it wasn't. Especially after the third round when Henry decided to take matters into his own hands.

Henry's sablemate and sparring partner, Terry Gibson, 145, Los Angeles, and Billy White, 147, Baltimore, put on a barroom brawl in the six-round semifinal after the main event, which was called a draw. Both boys hammered away without a letup. It was a pretty good decision for a change.

In six round preliminaries, Ray Brown, 133, New York, easily outpointed Charley Bennett, 139, Washington; Manual Rosa, 153½, Baltimore, decisioned Al Franklin, 152½, Washington, although many thought otherwise, and Jesse Harris, 146, United States Coast Guard, won a close decision over Lee Rosan, 150, Baltimore.

Bromwich Wounded In Cricket Match

Adelaide, Australia, April 30 (AP). John Bromwich, Australian Davis Cup tennis star now in uniform in New Guinea, has been wounded in action—nonmilitary action.

In a letter to a friend Bromwich said that, while fielding in a cricket match, he raised his hands in front of his head just in time to deflect a .22-caliber bullet accidentally discharged from an undetermined source.

The bullet entered the palm of Bromwich's hand and narrowly missed his temple. The wound is not serious.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 30.—"I can assure you that the War Department will not sponsor or approve a Louis-Conn match this summer," said Secretary of War Stimson at his last press conference.

Near this item on the sports pages was a note that Pvt. Ray Robinson, of the Air Corps, was fighting one Freddie Cabral in the Boston Garden.

CONSIDINE

More or less recently, there were notices that efforts were being made to match Pvt. Melio Bettina against Jimmy Bivins, Sergt. Jackie Wilson against Henry Armstrong, Sailor Gus Lesnevich against somebody else, and so on.

All prominent fighters in the armed forces seem able to get time to train, a furlough long enough to fight, and may fight for the benefit of themselves and their managers. But the only "natural" left in the fistic game cannot come off because the old gentleman in Washington says it can't. The millions of men in uniform want to read about it or hear it on the radio. The country wants to see it, and under the proposed plan of making every ticket-holder buy a war bond in order to gain admission it would be the biggest fight, from a financial standpoint, ever held—dwarfing the second Dempsey-Tunney match which holds the record of $2,600,000 plus.

There is no excuse in the world for this ban on Louis and Conn. It is unfair, unreasonable and inconsistent. If other men in uniform are permitted to box, Louis and Conn should be permitted.

They are being discriminated against for no other reason than that Secretary Stimson—who doesn't know a boxing glove from a jai alai basket—was told that there was something dishonest about the arrangements for their phantom fight of last October.

The only mistake made in that battle that never came off was made by the War Department itself. A civilian representative of the department promised Louis that he would be paid enough to pay off his income taxes and his debts, if he fought Conn. He agreed, of course, only to learn when he came to New York on his approved furlough that either the plan had been changed or the officer who conducted the first meeting with the sportswriters' committee just didn't know what he was talking about. Anyway, the officer told the writers that Louis and Conn would fight for nothing and we duly printed just that in every paper in the country, not knowing that Louis had gone to the officer immediately after the meeting and reminded him that he had been promised certain revenue from the match.

After the ensuing "investigation," which cast a wholly unjust light on two non-coms who took none of the initiative in the case, Secretary Stimson said he was "shocked" by the revelations. Out of an almost certain gate of a million dollars, Louis and Conn were to be paid about $175,000, which in turn was taxable. In other words they were to get 17½ per cent of the gate. Their peace-time percentage would be 60 per cent. The rest of the October 12 gate was to go to a war charity. But, as we said, Secretary Stimson was "shocked," and the men were ordered back to their respective posts.

We're shocked, too, but by the inconsistency of a policy which apparently permits every professional boxer in uniform to fight except the only two service fighters who want not only to fight but to help along the war effort by fighting.

Several days ago Mrs. John Knight Waters, wife of a lieutenant colonel who is now a prisoner of the Germans, received a trophy at Pimlico from the Maryland Jockey Club. The occasion was Johnny Waters day at the track, and a war charity was cut in on the receipts.

Mrs. Waters said after the ceremony that receiving racing trophies was "a 30-year-old habit of my family." Mrs. Waters wasn't overstating it. She is the daughter of Lieut. Gen. George S. "Blood and Guts" Patton, the tough cavalryman-turned-tank-expert who used to ride in steeplechase races at Pimlico years ago. Patton, a fearless horseman, won many events.

"I remember those plates very well," Mrs. Waters commented, "because when I was a good little girl my father would let me eat ice cream off them."

Lieut. Col. Waters, well known in Maryland racing circles, put up a whale of a fight in North Africa before the Nazis roped him. General Eisenhower, commenting on his capture, said, "I pray to God that I will be permitted to do my duty as well as Johnny Waters did his."

Lemme see now . . . Two bucks on Gold Shower to win the Derby will bring me back $34.80, then I'll bet that back on Ben Whittaker's tip in the following race . . . That'll be $982.30 and I'll put that on the longest shot in the last race, and . . .

Montgomery Easily Defeats Gene Johnson

By the Associated Press

Scranton, Pa., April 30.—Philadelphia's Bob Montgomery tuned up for his May 21 Lightweight title bout with champion Beau Jack by soundly drubbing Gene Johnson of Elizabeth, N. J., in a 10-round bout before 3500 at the Armory tonight.

Constantly attacking in his usual weaving style, Montgomery kept throwing lefts and rights that had Johnson on the defensive throughout the fight.

In the second and fourth rounds the Philadelphia Bobcat whipped over rights that had Johnson on the verge of a knockout but the Elizabeth Negro stood the severe body punishment to go the route. In fact, Johnson finished strong enough to win the 10th round.

Judge Charley Games gave Montgomery eight rounds, Johnson one and called one even. Judge Chris Colovis gave Montgomery seven rounds and Johnson three. Referee Jack Walton agreed with Games. The Associated Press score card gave Montgomery seven rounds, Johnson one and called two

Government Girl Plane Fund Rises $645 in Day to $143,135

The Government Girl warplane fund jumped to $143,135 yesterday as tentative plans for colorful presentation ceremonies May 9 were announced by the Government committee in charge of the drive.

Yesterday's contributions totaled $645, with the Department of Justice the day's heaviest contributor with $392. The Department of Labor gave $93 for second place, and third was the Federal Communications Commission with $65.

Most sizable contributions are believed now to be in, although one nest egg, being retained until it reaches full growth, is in the offing. This gift, along with others which come in, will be enough to raise the total to more than $150,000.

With representatives of the Army and Navy present, the Government committee yesterday drew up plans for the presentation of two planes to the Army and Navy on Sunday, May 9 at 3 p. m. The ceremony will take place on the Ellipse, south of the White House, with high Government officials, ranking officers of the Army and Navy and Government girls (and men) participating.

The program will be preceded by music from bands of the Army and Navy which will play throughout the ceremony. Presentation and acceptance speeches will be brief, and the most colorful phase of the program will be the christening of the two planes, with their sponsors and honor guests chosen from all Government agencies participating.

Last night the corps of honor guards met in the Department of Commerce for instructions and rehearsal. From their number, the two sponsors, who will preside at the christening ceremonies, are to be chosen.

As currently set up, the presentation program will not last longer than one hour, and it will go on, rain or shine.

An attractive Government Girl insignia was chosen yesterday for the planes, but neither the design nor its author may be revealed pending review and acceptance by Army and Navy officials.

Commissioners Get FWA Grant of $77,368 for Child Care

An offer of $77,368 for the maintenance and operation of 20 child care centers in the District was formally tendered the Commissioners yesterday by the Federal Works Agency, with a 10-day limit for acceptance.

This grant, which is to provide for 10 preschool age nurseries and 10 extended school age centers for the children of working mothers, had previously been announced by the FWA, but the Commissioners had received no formal notice of it until yesterday.

There is no doubt of the Commissioners that the offer will be accepted with dispatch at the District Building.

The funds granted by the FWA will only provide for half the expense of operating these child care centers for six months. The other 50 per cent of the operating expenses are expected to be met from fees charged the mothers of the children admitted. The Commissioners have warned that unless these fees prove adequate the entire program must be abandoned, since the District had no funds to apply to such uses.

The centers, whose sites are to be determined by the Board of Education, will accommodate 300 children of preschool and 500 children of school age.

A previous grant of $13,125 provided for child care centers located in the 300 block of D Street Southeast, to care for 70 children.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This column is turned over to Federal workers each Saturday for their views and comments. The column below is an answer to recent congressional criticism of Federal employes who take time off from work for a coffee or a coke.

The Coffee Drinkers

Every now and then, about once with every change of congressman, a scandal is raised by reason of the fact that most Government workers—like white collar toilers everywhere—leave their desks in midmorning and again in midafternoon and head for the nearest cafeteria, drugstore soda fountain or ramshackle lean-to where drinks and buns are dispensed. Before the scandal runs its course, tongues wag, newspapers print stories, officials grow perturbed, the outside world looks with the well-known jaundiced eye, makes clucking noises in its teeth, blows empty phrases about time wasted away from Government desks and about squandering the taxpayers' money. And even as absenteeism in industry is now a national issue, this time-wasting too becomes a subject for congressional investigation.

Having been one of the gay company of coffee drinkers for these many years, I am sure that it would take more than the report of a congressional committee, the pep talks of division chiefs or the closing of cafeteria doors to stop people from leaving their desks.

As things are now, and until legislation can be drafted to change human nature, I incline to agree with Arnold Bennett, who believes a man goes to his work, or as he expresses it, "begins his business functions with reluctance, as late as he can, and ends them with joy, as early as he can." A man's job, Bennett says, is something to "get through" and have "done with," and since this is so, I say that come war, come famine, come plague of locusts or rain of brimstone, people are going to use every expedient and device to make the working day more pleasant. And the working day will continue to be suffered, borne with and "gotten through" so that men can get off to listen to music, play tennis, make love or go to war!

A few years ago the cafeteria of one of the largest Government buildings in the world used to remain open all day long and coffee drinkers could sit at the tables any time of the day and whoop it up, absenting themselves from their desks an hour at a stretch. When the hue and cry was raised, the doors were closed until 10 o'clock and chairs were removed from the tables except during lunch periods. But, as everybody knows, this didn't phaze the interim coffee drinkers in the slightest. Extremely adaptable, they took very well to standing up, became in fact quite adroit at balancing a cup of coffee in one hand, dunking a doughnut with the other, and even seemed to grow enough extra hands to smoke a cigarette and gesticulate while talking all at the same time.

Those were the days when I used to take my coffee with some of the boys of the press and publications division of the bureau in the above-described building. I was like the Shulamite woman who kept not her own vineyard, but I strayed in pleasant company. And this is as good a place as any to say that the press boys make the best coffee-drinkers of them all. The writer fellows are the story tellers, the raconteurs, the dreamers of dreams. No one knows better than they do how to relax—after some inexorable deadline has been met—and no one knows better what drinking and good conversation do for the troubled spirit of the office-bound minion. Verily, they stay themselves with flagons and are comforted with apples.

In the war agency where I now serve, the doors of the cafeteria remain closed until 10:30; at 10:25 the crowds are pounding at the gates, through which they soon pour like a stampeding herd of buffalo. In a few minutes their friends join them, doubling the long line, joyous shouts fill the air, and knots of men and "gals" gather in tense groups all agog with government gossip. This sociability (surely it's not hunger!), this kindly or malicious delight in the other fellow's company, is an interesting thing to note and be a part of. Men and women are admittedly unpredictable; and in view of the fact that they are, besides, insatiable, unquenchable and irrepressible, what good would it serve to put the screws on this gregarious impulse?

The very men who believe this sort of thing should be stopped, the officials who sit in judgment, are after all only the slightly more privileged who may if they choose sit in their private offices and send a messenger or secretary for a gallon of coffee and a crate of doughnuts with which to cheer and beguile the informal conferences of would-be brain-trusters. This persistent human failing that is as manifest in the executive as in the clerk, in the former professor as the messenger boy (they say that even some Congressmen are tainted with it), forces me to the conclusion that it cannot be bottled or sublimated, that it is simply a factor to be reckoned with.

Let the righteous in the Government and out hurl their brickbats, let them send their jaundiced eyes in the mail to Kluttz for allowing this column to be printed, I still opine that it is vastly fortunate for the world, for the Allied cause and the coming victory, that men and women make war with greater gusto and enthusiasm than they piddle with papers at a desk.

So here's to the coffee-drinkers. For if you look closely among them, you will find the men who write the Nation's songs.—CYNARA.

Deferment Hearings Open Monday

House Committee Seeks to Reduce 840,000 Workers In Service of U. S.

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Determined to cut down the number of draft deferments in Government service which its interim report showed to total more than 840,000, the House Draft Deferment Committee yesterday announced hearings on deferments within the Office of War Information would be held Monday at 10:30 a. m.

At the same time Representative Costello (Democrat) of California, committee chairman, urged that General Hershey issue a memorandum to all local boards, ordering them to post lists of all 2-A and 2-B men deferred in the draft.

"When people found out the lists were posted, I am sure plenty would see them," Costello said.

A spokesman for National Selective Service yesterday termed Costello's request "superfluous" and pointed out that Selective Service regulations require posting of such lists in all local board headquarters.

The amendment of Selective Service regulations requiring the posting of draft status is as follows:

'After each local board meeting a copy of the local board action report (Form 1-10) listing registrants who have been classified, or whose classifications has been changed, shall be posted and kept permanently posted in a conspicuous place in the office of the local board. A copy also shall be sent to the Government appeal agent.

"When a person is unable to ascertain the current classification of a registrant from the posted copy of the local action report an employe of the local board, upon request, shall consult classification records (Form 100) and furnish to the person making inquiry the current classification of such registrant."

Nathan Gives Views

Deferment of essential men in Government employment and public announcement of their essentiality would halt the drift of key men to the armed services, Robert R. Nathan, former WPB planning committee chief, said in a broadcast last night.

Nathan made his assertion in the course of a forum conducted by the Federal Index over Station WINX. William C. Nemeth, editor of the Index, acted as moderator. Other speakers included Representative James M. Costello (Democrat) of California, chairman of a House Military Affairs Subcommittee investigating draft deferment in the Government, James Grady, president of the Society for the Advancement of Management and Edward Hickey, also of the society.

Costello, in reply, said that he thought the present program of setting up replacement schedules and manning tables would show men were essential and therefore take from those deferred any public opprobium.

Nathan said that his plea did not extend to clerks in filing rooms and stenographers who were easily replaceable. He also maintained that publicity resulting from Costello's committee report had resulted in many men essential to the Government entering the Army.

Ration Period End Causes Buying Rush

Extravagant use of formerly hoarded meat and canned goods coupons to convert them into food before their expiration last midnight, resulted yesterday in Washington householders being assured groaning tables over the weekend. Incidentally stocks of choice meat cuts were exhausted in some butcher stalls as another result.

As with meat so it was with canned goods, but owing to the greater variety of this food offered for sale, dealers were able to come nearer meeting the demand.

While many of the scattered neighborhood stores were soon sold out of roast beef, steaks, roast of pork and some of pork chps, a tour through the New Center Market, Fifth and K Streets, found butchers' stalls filled with all kinds of meat. Also, be it known, poultry dealers there had show cases positively filled with that currently rara avis, the chicken.

Where meat dealers found themselves unable to meet the demands of housewives because of reduced stocks, they made arrangements, in some instances, to permit housewives to "deposit" their coupons with them and promised delivery late today.

In the hurly-burly of shopping one woman found she had used all of her coupons but one. That worried her and she frantically asked the dealer what she could get with the one.

'Nothing!'

"Nothing," was the laconic answer.

She looked as though she had been cheated somehow.

Another woman with 24 coupons left after she had bought all she wanted, pondered long and finally splurged to get another pound of butter, which, she hoped, would keep while she ate up her previous purchase.

Martyred Fliers' Bond Sale Day May Establish Record in Drive

District War Finance Committee officials last night expressed the belief that the "Martyred Flyers' Day" observance in Washington yesterday recorded the heaviest daily sale of Second War Loan securities since the campaign started April 12.

No figures were available, but reports from all issuing agents—banks, building and loan associations, retailers, postoffices and theaters—indicated a record-breaking business which would push far higher the District's tabulated total of $46,409,699—already more than 10 per cent over the nonbanking quota of 42 million dollars.

Campaign Continues

Thursday's sales, the committee announced, amounted to $3,139,981. Meantime, reports that all sales of E, F and G bonds through Washington banks by next Thursday will be counted in this city's Second War Loan total, raised the probability that the District may exceed its original quota by far more than 25 per cent.

Washington, proud though it might be of this splendid record, is no exception. Undersecretary of the Treasury Daniel W. Bell predicts that the national 13-billion-dollar quota would be exceeded by three billion dollars. Even so, he said, there will be no relaxation of effort short of the formal conclusion of the drive at midnight today.

"Anybody who has not yet lent his dollars while his fighting fellow Americans are giving their lives can have this last-minute opportunity to contribute to this greatest financing program in history," Bell said.

The District yesterday looked as the city customarily does on the Fourth of July. Street flags were out. Store windows plugged the sale of bonds with patriotic displays, and for the first time in its history, on any day other than a major legal holiday, the Capital Transit Co. decked out its carriers with American flags.

Exclusive of the total sales already reported and tabulated, the District War Finance Committee reported "a great volume" of sales being received at the Federal Reserve Bank in Richmond, where tabulations, as might be expected, are running a considerable distance behind actual sales.

The Federation of Citizens Associations, which will hold a giant bond rally at 8 p. m. today in the Departmental Auditorium, announced several additions to the program in the persons of Irvin S. Cobb, the humorist, and Senator Arthur Capper (Republican) of Kansas, both of whom will speak. A full program of music and entertainment has been arranged.

More Highlights

Additional war bond highlights:

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, announced that the school had purchased $139,500 in Second War Loan securities from its endowment fund.

The Metropolitan Police Department Credit Union, through its president, Pvt. Lawrence D. Johnson, revealed it had purchased $10,000 in bonds through the Liberty National Bank.

A total of $9550 in war bonds was contributed yesterday by members of the Uptown Washington Lions Club, Berneard Elman, chairman, announced last night. The bonds will purchase six peeps, which will be dedicated by the club May 19.

City News in Brief

The Ninth Street Bridge, across the terminal yards in the Northeast section will henceforth be known as the Brentwood Bridge, the District Commissioners ruled yesterday.

This change, made at the request of the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations, received the endorsement of the Highway Department, which pointed out that Ninth Street terminated a short distance from the northern end of the bridge and did not exist on the southern end.

Brentwood Parkway, on the other hand, not only gives a more musical name to the bridge, but actually approaches it on the southern end.

Plan to Aid Blind

The directors of the Washington Society for the Blind were hosts to the trustees of the Welfare and Recreation Association at the Statler Hotel when Admiral Ross McIntire explained to the joint groups the plan of rehabilitating blind and handicapped men wounded in the war. Although the plan has not been fully organized so that actual operation can be expected in the near future, McIntire stated that definite progress is being made. Other speakers included Representative Jennings Randolph of West Virginia and William H. Dyer, president of the society.

The Rev. Father Speer Sperahan, chaplain with the United States Army, who was at Pearl Harbor when the bombing occurred, will be the principal speaker at the local breakfast. All Notre Dame alumni members are invited.

D. C. Housing Conversion Shows Gain

Many Units Soon to Be Ready For Warworkers In the District

One hundred and one war-working Washington families will have new homes as soon as work is completed on a group of houses in the metropolitan area now being converted into apartments under the National Housing Agency's nation-wide conversion program, it was learned yesterday.

Already well under way, the old, unused three-story apartment building at 247 Delaware Avenue Southeast, will provide 38 apartments for home-starved Washingtonians when it is finished, probably early in July.

The conversion program, which is being nationally promoted by the Homes Use division of NHA as one possible method of conserving critical materials while providing homes for warworkers, seeks to utilize existing structures which are either unused or too large for their owners' convenience by turning them into small apartments.

Wherever possible, home owners are urged to remodel their dwellings through private investment. Where this is not possible, however, the Government, through the Home Owners Loan Corp., will lease the dwelling for a seven-year period (or up to two years after the war, whichever is the longer period) and with public financing will remodel and rent it to war workers. Under public financing, maximum of $2500 can be spent on each living unit.

While the Delaware Avenue house is the only one at present under reconstruction, bids are being taken for conversion of 25 others in the District, Marvin Wire, director of the War Housing Center, said yesterday.

Seventeen of these are in Washington proper, with six in Alexandria, Va., and two in Arlington, Va. When completed, they will provide 92 living units.

Funds and materials are now available for 400 additional accommodations to be built by the Government, and WPB has released sufficient materials to build another 750 living units with private funds.

Should requests for private building exceed the 750 figure, an NHA official pointed out yesterday, necessary materials will be released by WPB, as the need arises.

Keech Gives Dressed Fowl Price Opinion

The sale of dressed poultry at the price of the undressed fowl—feathers, entrails and all—was declared by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech yesterday to be illegal.

In other words, if you go into a market and buy an undressed chicken and then have the butcher clean it for you, he should then charge you by weight of the plucked product and not by original weight—also by rates fixed for dressed fowl.

Keech's opinion was given to the District Commissioners after J. T. Kennedy, superintendent of Weights, Measures and Markets, had complained: "It is the custom in the District for farmers bringing dressed poultry to the several markets to sell such poultry based on a unit per pound weight before dressing, that is to say, the fowl is first weighed, then killed, dressed and brought to the market. It is then sold to the retail customers at the pound weight determined before the killing as stated. This practice has now become more or less widespread to poultry stands other than those operated by farmers."

Victory Sidelights

Soldier Tells Of Hardships On Pacific Isle

Pvt. Maurice Umans, U. S. A., 25, of New York City, who left his right foot on Guadalcanal, last night told of the fighting and privations on that South Sea Island.

He spoke before a mass meeting of war workers of the Mid-City Area, in the Immaculate Conception School, Eighth and N Streets Northwest.

He told of vicious mosquitoes whose bites left deep holes in arms and legs; sleeping in mud holes with two and three inches of water for a couch, of soldiers dreaming of home—of girl friends, of what the family were doing, of what they were eating.

He also said that the boys "out there" often speculated as to what the civilians back home were doing, while they lay in the dark jungle swamps awaiting the flash of a sniper's gun or the thunder of a cannon heralding a major assault.

At the meeting a new Civilian Defense Committee was named consisting of Dr. Edwin B. Henderson, Joseph P. Hall, Mrs. Armand W. Scott, Frederick Levy, Dr. George Adams, Nathan Goodman, Estes Branch, Clayton Gasque, C. C. Lattin and J. P. Scott.

11 Arrested In Raid on 2 Dope Dens

Quantities of Heroin, Morphine and Other Property Seized In Midnight Sortie

Two dope dens where thieves are believed to have pawned stolen property for heroin, morphine, cocaine and even opium were smashed and 11 persons were arrested by Federal agents and detectives early yesterday.

Separate raiding squads struck simultaneously at the two establishments, 15 Allen Court Southwest, and 934 First Street Southwest, at 12:30 a. m. Four women were included among the suspects.

Quantities of narcotics and between $3000 and $4000 worth of jewelry, furs and other articles were seized, police reported. The raiders said they expect to trace all of the valuables to recent housebreaking cases.

Four of those arrested were accused of violating the Harrison Narcotic Act. They were identified as Lamar E. (Polly) Brown, 39, of the First Street address; Margaret S. Kelly, 25, 1200 Fifteenth Street Northwest; James J. Jackson, 48, of Allen Court; and James D. Meade, 28, 420 Eighth Street Southwest.

Released Under Bail

With the exception of Brown, those charged were arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday afternoon and were released under bail. The woman and Meade posted $1000 each and Jackson $2500.

Brown put up $2500 bail at the First Precinct Station at the time of his arrest. All of the cases were continued for two weeks to afford the suspects time to obtain counsel.

The seven others taken into custody but not charged were being held last night for investigation as suspected burglars.

The Allen Court Place, an alley dwelling, was raided by Special Investigator Karle T. Howe and Precinct Detectives C. O. Rouse and T. C. Sullivan, First Precinct. Two women and three men were present and one of those not charged, it was said, was caught in the act of administering a shot of heroin with a hypodermic needle.

Howe said that 100 decks of heroin and quantities of cocaine, morphine and opium and paraphernalia such as needles, syringes and cooking spoons were found.

Bacon in Ice Box

The First Street establishment, a second-floor apartment, was entered by Detective Sergt. H. H. Carper and Detectives H. H. Caranfa, John Layton and William Taylor. Carper said he recovered narcotic vials from a kitchen stove where they were burning when the raiders entered. Ten pounds of bacon were in an ice box, he said.

Federal Agent LeRoy Morrison of the Washington area supervised the raids.

It was learned that police have had the two places under surveillance for some time, as one policeman said afterward narcotic addicts frequently must steal and rob to obtain funds for purchasing the "happy powder."

Raiders said they found five fully loaded revolvers and other property included 3 fur coats and fur cape, a radio and large quantity of gold rings, from which stones had been removed and at least 20 diamond wedding rings and watches.

Cabbies Refuse Service; Patron Has Last Laugh

Two Washington cab drivers are figuratively laughing on the other side of their faces after they laughed at a prospective passenger when he asked them to drive him downtown. They not only laughed at his insistence and refused to haul him, but when he told them he would report them to authorities, they laughed again.

The prospective passenger was as good as his word and reported the drivers. Result: the District Commissioners approved a 15-day suspension of their hacker's license.

The complainant told the Board of Revocation he approached the drivers at a gas station near Eighteenth and S Streets Northwest and asked them to take him downtown.

Chairman of the PUC said "an object lesson" was made of the drivers and requested all persons to report any discourtesy or overcharging by cab drivers.

Completely without fanfare Countess Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, went yesterday to the District Red Cross Blood Donor Center at Twenty-third and C Streets Northwest to add her contribution of a pint of blood to the 75,271 already donated to the plasma bank.

Let the Hurricane Blow

BY MICHAEL TRENT

CHAPTER XXII

Tonia lighted the cigarette on the third match. She rose and took it to the German, standing squarely in front of him. Burke would lay aside neither gun nor flashlight. "Put it between my lips, beautiful. That's a nice girl——". He got no farther, for Tonia had turned the lighted end about and jabbed it against his lips. Burke cried out, and Tonia screamed, "Now, Steve—now!" Steve was already rushing forward, striking the German and throwing him off the box. The flashlight crashed to the floor and went out, and in the sudden darkness the gun exploded. Ruth found herself standing, a rising hysteria of fear in her. She could hear Tonia calling to her. She heard the two men thrashing about, fighting furiously—and then there was a sudden crashing and rending of timbers and the warehouse itself gave way under the pressure of the hurricane.

It was the worst part of the nightmare. Overhead the roof sagged terribly, then the rear wall caved in. The noise was a bedlam. Someone caught hold of Ruth and shouted at her. "Come! This is the en ' It took her an instant to recognize Dr. Cartier's voice. Somehow he had gotten out of his bonds and now was pushing her through the darkness. They reached a door that the wind had already opened, and he pushed her through and told her to run.

The wind struck Ruth a giant blow, forced her to her knees. She rose and tried to fight her way back into the building, but in the doorway she came upon Dr. Cartier bringing Tonia through. He caught her arm and forced her back away from the collapsing building. She tried to break away.

"Ruth, we must find other shelter!"

She struggled against his grip. "Steve is in there!" she cried. "Don't you see?" Despair was in her voice. "We've got to get him out!"

"It's too late," Dr. Cartier said.

The walls were crashing down explosively. The noise drove like physical blows against Ruth's heart. She began to sob almost hysterically. Tonia slipped her arms about her. The wind tore at them viciously, but less violently than before. The hurricane's damage had been done.

The new day was crystal clear and very calm, like a bright new world. The island was strewn with wreckage, but there at the air base the hurricane had touched but lightly.

Ruth rested quietly on her army cot in nurses' quarters, as the medical officer had ordered her to. It seemed a long time ago that the soldiers had come to the native village. Then she had not wanted to come away, not knowing about Steve, but Dr. Cartier and Tonia had taken her firmly in hand. It was a long time ago, hours ago, and still they had not told her about Steve.

Quick footsteps sounded in the building, and then Laura Hanley was approaching her bed. Ruth lifted herself up, her eyes questioning.

"They've brought Captain Lowry in," Laura excitedly told her. "He is all right—or almost all right. It was an hour ago, but this is the first time I could get away with the news."

Ruth's face lighted up with a vast relief. "Oh, I'm so glad!" she spoke impulsively, from the heart, and all at once she did not need to rest. "I'd like to see him, just to be sure. Do you think . . ."

"By a strange coincidence," Laura said, laughing, "the captain asked to see you."

He was just leaving the hospital when Ruth arrived. His head was bandaged and his left arm was in a sling, but his grin was as carefree as ever. They halted by a doorway and looked at one another, and finally Steve said, half jokingly, "I hear you made a scene last night when the warehouse came down."

Ruth tried to be as casual as he. "It's not the first time I made a fool of myself over you, Steve. I'm so glad you're safe." She looked away, annoyed by the color she felt burning in her cheeks. "I'm awfully ashamed of myself. Tonia acted so bravely. She's a better soldier than I, Steve, I can't dislike her anymore."

"She left today," he said. "The transport plane had orders to take off. I didn't see her, but she left a note. She said she had a wonderful time here, but enough was enough. She wished us—you and me, Ruth—a lot of happiness."

"She's such a good sport, Steve. Tell her so when you see her again."

"We'll see her together, darling—some day."

She stared at him, not quite understanding because she was afraid to understand. She told herself he couldn't mean that everything was over between Tonia and him. Someone came up the corridor behind them. It was Dr. Cartier. He smiled, and said, "Did I hear you speak of Miss Wayne? A very remarkable person. And very intelligent."

"She's gone, Jean," Ruth said.

"I know, Ruth. I saw her off. We had a friendly talk this morning." He smiled wistfully and yet his eyes were gayer than Ruth had ever seen them. "We understand each other, Miss Wayne and I, and when she told me how long you two have been in love . . ." He took Ruth's hand and placed it in Steve's. "You know, my encounter with Burke was a test. He bested me, yes, but facing him proved to me that I still have the strength and courage to face things out." He smiled again. "It is too bad he died in the wreckage . . . I should thank him."

He touched their clasped hands, then turned and went back to the corridor. As he disappeared into the surgery, Steve said, "He's a good sport, too, darling." He looked t her searchingly. "Is Tonia right, Ruth? Are you in love with me?"

"I gave myself away last night, Steve, when I made that scene."

"My scenes weren't quite so honest," he said, frowning now. "The other night I let you see me kiss Tonia because you seemed a bit confused about me—even though you swore you loved Dr. Cartier. I wanted to give you a break by appearing a heel a second time."

"It hurt, Steve."

"But for the last time, darling," he told her, and slipped his uninjured right arm about her. Steve looked around carefully. No one was watching. "Ruth," he whispered, and quickly kissed her.

(THE END)

"One Summer's Romance"

Lisa Alden was totally unprepared for Johnny Bradford's arrival in Feather River Valley. She had expected an elderly fellow with wife and children. Instead Johnny turned out to be young and handsome and single.

Mark Wellman with whom Lisa had so long been in love was very disturbed over her infatuation for Johnny Bradford. He blew up completely when Lisa accepted Johnny's almost incredible offer. And it wasn't until much later when she was back in the Valley, and both of the boys were there, that she knew what her heart had been trying to tell her all Summer.

Don't miss this delightful story of love and gay romance beginning in Monday's Washington Post.

THE MAGIC HAT

By Jeanne Contini

Sooner or later into the life of every writer comes the temptation to tackle perfection . . . the perfect world, the perfect crime, the perfect dress. We succumb to the perfect hat. On the surface, that sounds as fantastic as a pair of mail-order eyeglasses. We hope to prove otherwise. For summer, we nominate a hat that is both black and big. It can be either felt or straw, and does not necessarily have to transform you into a merry widow or a witch of the Andes. As a matter of fact it will make you look more like yourself than the sugary millinery peccadillos worn all spring ostensibly to bring out the female in a men's wear suit.

A big black hat with good basic shape can be found for every face. If you are limiting yourself to one summer hat, that is the thing to buy.

Because it goes with everything. It dresses cottons, picks up pastels, and quiets noisy prints. Pin a rose to the brim or add veiling, and you have the perfect crown for a bare-arm black sheer.

Like black lace, a big black hat is the very essence of glamour to most women . . . with ample justification. You cannot put it on without feeling more attractive. The large shadowy shape softens bold features and throws delicate ones into relief. It adds an indefinable something to your costume if you so much as carry it in your hand.

The hat we picture is a smooth black milan, innocent of folderol and ravishing just as it is. About $17.00. For its whereabouts please call NAtional 4200, ext. 324.

But whether it is this one or another is unimportant. For the good of your wardrobe and perhaps for the good of your soul you ought to own one.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

In view of the fact that there is such a general disposition to discourage a parent from taking up or caring for a crying baby—for fear that he may become "spoiled" and demanding — I want to print the following letter.

"My baby was born a lovely, healthy little girl and I was so pleased that I could nurse her," writes Mrs. M. M. "However, having no relatives or any help in the home, I came back from the hospital ten days after she was born and began caring for her and the house. Within three days the baby began to cry. I was told to let her cry it out or she would be spoiled. My own doctor became ill and I had a doctor, not a pediatrician, look at her. The same advice was given. He saw her in his office and she screamed the whole time. But he found her not sick and so advised again to put her where I couldn't hear her and let her cry it out. He said she was 'terribly spoiled.'

"I kept to this advice until she was two months old. At one month she weighed less than when she was born. At ten weeks I was thoroughly discouraged and decided to use my own judgment. I prepared a complementary formula and let her have as much as she wanted of it after a nursing. From that moment on I had a good baby. I was so weak and sick I could hardly enjoy her.

"At three months I gave her cereal and later vegetables and egg yolk. Also, I cuddled her as often as I felt like it and she thrived beautifully.

"She sat up independently at seven months, walked alone at 14 months and fed herself alone from that age on. She has 17 words in her vocabulary and is full of smiles and fun all of the time.

"Since my experience I have known four mothers who were given the same advice. Because of that, I felt I had to write this letter, as I have worried so much and repented of my treatment of the baby that when I read letters about mothers who neglect their crying babies it affects me deeply."

You need not blame yourself. I think doctors, knowing the worrisome nature of new mothers, are apt to conclude that if the mother would let the baby alone it would be better for the baby. But not when there is chronic and persistent crying. That demands attention and to fail to give it to the baby on the excuse that the baby would take advantage of one's care is brutal and cruel.

Find out what makes the baby cry, taking it for granted that when the wrong is corrected, the baby will be as content as babies are intended to be.

Our leaflet, "The First Six Weeks," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post.

Canteen Supper

In the meantime over at the Women's National Democratic Club tomorrow night will be the Red Cross unit's canteen supper for servicemen under the chairmanship of Mrs. Samuel Herrick. Incidentally, this is a monthly event of the club. So great has been the response of men in the armed forces that plans are being formulated to continue the supper during the summer. Mrs. James Fields is supervising the supper. Entertainment usually consists of dancing and a special musical program arranged by Mrs. Walter Maloney.

Recently Mrs. George L. Sioussat made an appeal to club members for more funds to carry on the canteen suppers. The response brought in a sufficient amount to meet expenses. However, this is but one of the club's many war activities. Sewing rooms are open to its members and there will be a display of the work done Monday afternoon when the Democratic Club holds its annual meeting followed by a tea at 4:30 p. m. to welcome the new officers of the club.

In the Spotlight

Today the young folk hold the spotlight. For example, the Camp Fire Girls of the Potomac Area are gathering at 1:30 p. m., Perkins Hall, Universalist Church, Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest, to participate in the annual Grand Council Fire—a ceremonial at which members receive recognition for work accomplished during the past 12 months. It is a part of the inspirational program of the Camp Fire year and represents the culmination of many hours spent in study, specialized activities and fun.

One of the most important features of the program is recognition for progress in rank. Most difficult of attainment is the rank of Torch Bearer Craftsman, which may be earned in 17 subjects. Five girls have advanced to this rank during the year. All chose subjects that reflect living trends today.

More specifically, the winners, Jane Brandt accented health with her "Water Sports;" Betty Winkler and Virginia Muller emphasized "Folk Lore;" Peggy Summers and Doris Morette, specialized in "Gardening," now a universal subject.

In the three preliminary ranks, more than 100 girls will receive recognition. Mrs. Reynolds A. Lee, chairman of Committee Awards will present the various insignia and award the honors. Others making presentations include Mrs. Irene B. Caldwell, chairman of the council; Mrs. Ian Smith, former executive at Syracuse, N. Y., and Mrs. M. E. Janson, chairman of the Guardian Association.

"Seven Thrifties," a dramatization of the Serve by Saving project, current activity of Camp Fire Girls throughout the Nation, will be presented in pantomime.

Program Arranged

Forty-four troops of Girl Scouts in the District will participate in District No. 11 program of folk dancing, songs and games this afternoon, 4:30 to 8:30 o'clock in Palisades Park, Sherrier Place and Edmunds Street Northwest.

Some of the girls will wear native costumes of the various United Nations. Between the opening ceremony and the dance will be a nosebag luncheon.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsey

Squirrel's Wardrobe

THE HEAT is getting unbearable, and everybody is coming out in summer clothes, and you've simply got to go downtown and get some cool little cottons—wait though! Where are all those cottons you got last summer? The one you bought when everybody was whispering around that there wouldn't be any good cotton this summer? . . . We-ll, of course, you do have a few things laid in, but you really owe it to yourself to get something new—maybe one of those darling little seersucker suits you saw advertised in the paper . . . No wait! Where's that seersucker suit you rushed down and bought last summer when you heard there might not be any more good seersuckers?

We-ll, of course, you'll have to wear that, but you WILL get some pretty little chambray dresses! They're so cool and—Say, you have a couple of chambray dresses! The ones you had made by a dressmaker after you joined in that raid on the fabric counters a year ago last February when the word got around it would soon be impossible to get good chambrays. And you didn't wear them a great deal last summer because by the time you got them made it was July and everybody was getting into fall clothes.

YOU MIGHT get one of those little gingham two-piece dresses—no, you got a gingham dress last summer after that gingham scare when the saleswomen told you confidentially you'd better lay in ginghams. Well, one thing sure, you didn't get a shantung suit last summer and everybody's wearing shantung now. Besides, you haven't anything dark, and what if you went on a train? . . . Still people aren't going on trains now, and anyway you never went on trains when they did, and it's no use to be foolish because you have that nice spun rayon suit that you got when everybody said you'd never be able to get good spun rayon again.

Of course you COULD get some pretty new cotton blouses—you've seen some darling ones advertised. Still, there are the ones you bought at that end of season sale last summer. Don't you remember? When everybody was predicting that it would simply be impossible to get good blouses soon, and that it would be a good idea to lay in enough for the duration?

We-ll, maybe you do have enough suits and dresses, but one thing certain, you're going to have a new hat! Still—what about the one you kidded yourself into buying last summer because the saleswoman told you good straws were getting scarce and you wanted to get fixed up for the duration. (Funny how many straws there are in the shop windows this summer!) . . . Then there was that little straw beret you picked up when you were told it was a duration number. And that big white-off-the-face hat with the frill around the brim. Of course, they aren't wearing those frills this summer and there's something the matter with its line too.

YOU GET out your last summer's hats and try them on. They leave you flat and discouraged. There's something definitely wrong with them! Yet there's all the money you put in them. You felt so thrifty at the time, so self-satisfied, so sure you were all fixed up for the duration while all your shiftless butterfly friends would have to go bareheaded. Well, with the income taxes coming up and everything, there's nothing to do but wear all these leftovers. And maybe you won't see many people you care about this summer . . . or get invited many places. And maybe none of your old friends from out of town will show up.

Still, you ought to get at least one new thing to buck up your morale. Anyway, you'll go downtown and take a look around . . . maybe pick up some cute, little, inexpensive hat in a basement store . . . or look at the shantung (after all you MIGHT get on a train) and investigate those smart new striped cotton blouses because . . . after all the Government wants us all to look smart at this time and . . . from what you've been hearing, it might be good economy in the end to lay in a few things. Why no one can tell what the situation may be next summer!

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Here it is May and suddenly you are bent on getting your figure out of the doldrums. You are asking for sure-fire exercises to trim the waistline, flatten the midriff and slim inches off the hips—in a hurry. Furthermore you want to know just how long it will take to fix your figure!

All right, here's a promise—with 15 minutes of calisthenics every day, you can slim a good half inch off your waist in a week, and take a half inch off the hips in two weeks and tone the muscles of the abdominal girdle. Some of you will do better than that, and all of you will get such a good start toward improving your figure, you will want to keep right on with your daily half dozen.

But the fact that exercise will give you a beautiful figure isn't as important today as the fitness part of it. You feel so fit! Exercise tones you up as it trims you down, and the result is steadier nerves and more energy.

But a word of warning—start easily. You need five days to break into exercise. Begin with 5 minutes of easy calisthenics, and gradually work up to 15 to 20 minutes of vigorous exercise.

The exact movements that will pare inches off the waistline are upward stretching, waist twisting and side bending. With any of these movements the twist and bend must be centered smack at the waistline, otherwise it's waste motion so far as slimming goes. It's a good plan to anchor the hips as you twist and bend,

WAVES Learning Aircraft Specialties

On completion of their "boot" training, enlisted WAVES are sent to various specialist schools to acquire the skills which will enable them to replace men in all parts of the Navy. Here at the United States Naval Training School at Norman, Okla., girls who have come from schools and offices are learning to be aviation machinist mates and aviation metalsmiths the hard and practical way. Tools in hand, they struggle with metal and grease for four months to qualify for their ratings.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Martha Ellyn

Do you have some left-overs in your refrigerator? A few vegetables—carrots, peas, beans? Any left-over gravy. Okay, let's use them all up in one fell swoop, or rather in a tantalizing meat pie. Combine the cooked meat (cubed or diced), diced vegetable and gravy in a baking dish and top with a biscuit "lid." Vary the crust with a teaspoon of caraway or celery seed in the dough. Season the meat mixture with a teaspoon of caraway or celery seed in the dough. Season the mixture well with diced onion or seasonettes. Bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, until the meat and vegetables are piping hot and the crust is browned. Left-over stew can also be topped with a cheese pastry dough and baked to make a main dish.

There's a story behind this platter of meat balls, spaghetti and meat sauce. Seventeen meat balls from one-half pound of hamburger. The magic recipe is: Mix ½ pound hamburger with ½ cup evaporated milk, ½ cup cracker crumbs and ¼ cup grated onion. Add ½ teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Shape into balls and brown in hot fat until cooked. Serve with spicy tomato sauce (well worth a few ration points) in a separate dish, but you may prefer to combine the cooked spaghetti, meat balls and sauce. Either way it's a delicious supper for four persons. A crisp tossed salad, crusty rolls, a dessert and a beverage will round out the meal.

TIMELY PERSONALITIES

Ruth Woodsmall Returns by Transport From War Zones

World Y. W. C. A. Secretary in Capital After Visits in Great Britain, Sweden and Africa

By Martha Rhyne

It is her dignified simplicity and sincerity which make Miss Ruth F. Woodsmall, secretary of the World's Young Women's Christian Association, impressive.

Back in Washington, where the temporary world office functions as a supplement to the Geneva, Switzerland, world office, is this native Georgian who left the South too early to retain the slightest drawl. The end of a 4½-month tour in Great Britain, Sweden, and North Africa and a four-day trip by air transport from Algiers to Miami have left her tired but inspired. For she goes enthusiastically about preparation for the meeting of the widely representative executive committee of the world organization which will be held here the last week in May.

Visiting these countries at the invitations of the national Y. W. C. A. movements, she made the strenuous trip, bound in necessarily secret and hazardous movement over wartorn Europe, to view the present programs, discuss the reconstruction period and offer the coordination and cooperation with which the world organization binds the national movement in all countries, Allied, enemy or neutral. Asked about her methods and time of travel she humorously asserted, "The most important phase of travel nowadays is the safe arrival."

Centers Are Home Away From Home

In Great Britain, this brilliantly and practically educated woman with a B. A. degree from the University of Nebraska, an M. A. degree from Wellesley, graduate work at Columbia University in New York and teaching experience in modern languages before entering Y. W. C. A. work during the last war, found the women taking increasing responsibility in national undertakings. For Britain's women in uniform and for other nations' servicewomen stationed there, the Y. W. centers furnish entertainment and wholesome atmosphere. Hostels for the Land Army and munitions centers are furnished by the great organization and wherever the women gather for a purpose, the sign of the Blue Triangle is visible, be it in a one-hoom hut, a beautiful lounge, or a large building. Proudly she explained, "You will find a Y. W. center a spot of home away from home—a place where women may step out of regimentation and find peaceful moments."

In Sweden, neutral but national defense-conscious, there is a haven for refugees from Norway, Finland and other countries actually engaged in the hostilities. The Y. W. C. A. is a shuttle on which to weave together once more the broken threads of understanding into a great world-wide Christian movement. The world organization acts as adviser, interpreter and provider, a watchtower and a broadcasting station for all the Y. W. movements.

French Youth Is Planning Future

She spoke of clubs which are carried on in unoccupied France, of the Swedish secretary who works in Paris, of the Swiss secretary who represents the World's Y. W. C. A. in Germany, visiting the women internees of the Allied Nations. In time of war the giant organization works on both sides, interested in the welfare of the women internees as is the corresponding Y M. C. A. interested in prisoners of war. The organizations she describes as a means to an end — international education. They build for a world of peace, at the same time not seeking "escape" from current problems. Their present everyday job is to provide service in time of war but their long-range program is to shape postwar attitudes. In France, the Y. W. is seeking to get at the youth, through recreation, games, sports, and, most important, through an orientation period for postwar planning.

WAACS Stationed In Algiers Convent

In Algiers she contacted 200 American WAACS who were stationed in the Convent of the Good Shepherd in Elbiar, a suburb of Algiers. She found them making splendid adjustment and was impressed with the quality of the officers and their fine type of service in clerical, communications and mobile units. She praised the "true American spirit" with which the girls had made friends with the nuns. "There is no place these girls can go for recreation except to Y. W. C. A. centers. Besides the European women there, there are only the Moslem Arabs, who are a life apart from the city."

She was impressed in wartime countries with their unity of desire, their caution, conservation and concentration of effort. "They have definitely preserved their sense of humor. They are willing. Abnormal life has taken on a normal atmosphere. Concentrated effort is made to keep free of prejudice and bitterness and meet realistically the ever-changing demands of the present, at the same time building for the future."

War Service Is Promoting Peace

The organization in whose interest Miss Woodsmall has traveled in the Near and Far East, India, the Netherlands East Indies, North, South, Central America and Europe has modified its service to meet the wartime situations in every country. Intently bent on getting over her purpose she said again and again, "Providing entertainment and rest for uniformed women and women in wartime is a means to the great end of the Y. W. C. A.—to inspire and foster a Christian life, to render service through wartime opportunities which will erase prejudice, hate, and bloodshed and make wartime services unnecessary in time to come. That is the foundation we are endeavoring to lay."

Visitors Honored at Parties Here

Two of our "good neighbors" who are being honored at a round of festivities during their stay in the Capital are Luis Gil Salguero of Uruguay and Oswaldo Guayasamin of Ecuador. They are here as guests of the Department of State.

Among the fetes in honor of Senor Guayasamin was the luncheon at the Carlton yesterday at which Richard Pattee, of the State Department's Division of Cultural Relations, entertained. This is the first visit of Senor Guayasamin to the United States and he plans to be here several months, touring the leading art centers of the country.

A well-known Ecuadorean artist, Senor Guayasamin is credited by critics with the most original and imaginative works of art in contemporary South America. He works in several mediums, among them wood cuts and paintings. There are a number of his paintings on exhibit throughout the country and last year his paintings won first prize in the Mariano Aquilera Exhibition in Quito.

Miss Carolyn R. Nash gave a small afternoon tea at her home while the Emil Hurjas' "5 to 7" party honored Mr. and Mrs. Marquis James of New York and Eric Johnston, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and Mrs. Johnston.

The Chilean Naval Attache and Senora de Holger entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon. A large reception was held at the Brazilian Embassy by Mme. Martins, wife of the Ambassador.

The Treasury Department To Honor Variety Club

Flying Fortress to Be Named for Local Tent; Another 'Sleeper' Rumored in the Offing; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

REMEMBER that war bond premiere when the "Ice-Capades of 1943" played its last engagement over at Uline's Arena?

It was under the sponsorship of the Washington Variety Club, Tent No. 11 in the national organization of Variety Clubs of America. There was one just like it in Pittsburgh, under the auspices of Variety Club Tent No. 1, the daddy of them all.

CONSTANCE CUMMINGS

Well, whether you remember either one, or both, or neither, the United States Treasury Department does.

With the total of these premieres exceeding four million dollars in war bond sales, John H. Harris, founder and president of the Variety Clubs of America, has been advised by Carlton Duffus, former showman on his own account and now an executive in the Treasury Department, that two Flying Fortresses will be named in honor of the clubs responsible for all those sales.

One of the B-17's will be named "Variety Club of Washington, D. C.," the other "Variety Club of Pittsburgh."

The enemy will be sorry he ever joined either one of those!

Keep your eye peeled for another "sleeper" apt to come to life shortly on the screen at the Little Theater. It is a little something made in England under the title of "The Foreman Goes to France" and conscientiously ignored on this side as a United Artists release called, indecisively enough, "Somewhere in France." From the British reviews—some of them written by Americans resident there—it could be another "Night Train" or "The Lady Vanishes." Anyhow, we'll find out at a preview screening tentatively set for an early date. The cast is notable for the inclusion of the American Constance Cummings, in private life the wife of the English playwright, Benn W. Levy, and that admirable actor, Robert Morley.

And that reminds me. Stung, no doubt, by the "gentleman farmer" enterprises of such of her fellow-showmen as John J. Payette, Sidney Lust, Frank La Falce and divers and sundry others who have their country places, Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller, who presides over the flourishing destinies of the Little Theater, in association with Abe Tolkins, a confirmed city slicker, has gone and bought herself a farm down Virginia way. "It's a mess now, but wait until I get through fixing it up. It will make you a nice weekend alternate for Hains Point." Hains Point? I haven't been able to take a long trip like that for years!

A Warworkers Workshop

Washington's newest and most promising cooperative theater venture in years is heralded by the announcement that tryouts for "It's Up to You" will be held next Wednesday and Thursday at 8:30 p. m., in the Agriculture Auditorium, South Building, under the sponsorship of the Washington Workshop for Government Agencies. Sergt. Garson Kanin, motion picture director of note, heads the production advisory board, of which Stanley McCandless, Ben Jones and John McGee are the other members. The Washington Workshop is a nonprofit organization of Government people interested in the theater and cultural recreation, whose sole purpose is the fostering of worthwhile, leisure-time activities for the Capital's teeming thousands of civil servants.

"It's Up to You," of course, is the Department of Agriculture-Arthur Arent-Earl Robinson show that was given a one-night, preview performance by the original New York cast in the Department of Agriculture Auditorium on Sunday night, April 11, to the high acclaim of all who saw it. They perceived in it a unique combination of stage, screen, radio, loudspeaker, blackout and other techniques—if any—that provided an extraordinary quality of entertainment. It has been successfully presented in various spots under the joint auspices of the American Theater Wing, the Department of Agriculture, the food industry and the OWI. Its Washington run, date to be announced, will be open to the public without charge.

Catholic University's production of "Eddie the First," the musical biography of Eddie Dowling, which opens in the University Theater next Wednesday night, marks the culmination of a long association between the school and the subject of its spring charade. It was Eddie Dowling who, some six years or so ago, looked over the work being done by Father Gilbert V. Hartke and his associates and thus became the first of many Broadway notables who since have manifested interest in the Speech and Drama Department's productions. It was Dowling who first took the trouble to read some of the early C. U. scripts, notably those by Walter Kerr and Leo Brady, and it was he who arranged for Julie Haydon, brilliant young Broadway actress, to appear in several campus productions, including "Art and Prudence," an original now being readied for the big-time, and "Hotel Universe." With Dowling and his wife, Ray Dooley, all their Washington friends and Broadway so keenly interested, Wednesday night's opening should be a bit on the gala side.

Lest it slip some casual mind, tonight will mark the second and final performance of George Washington University's Cue and Curtain production of "Heart of the City," at Wardman Park Theater. Anne Evans and Dick Bear are cast in the principal roles, under the direction of Floyd Sparks.

FLASH—Producer John Golden has just told me that when he opens "The Home Front" on Broadway Monday night, direct from its hit week at the National, it will be under the new title of "Three's A Family"—its fourth and the best of the lot. Mrs. Henry Ephron (Phoebe), co-author of the play with her husband, thought it up.

Reducing-Made-Easy Note

Earle

Bristling with violently exciting action, yet honest and moving in its contemplation of the plight of occupied Norway, the Warner Brothers production of "Edge of Darkness" thunders into a second week on the screen at the Earle Theater.

There is a close affinity between "Edge of Darkness" and John Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down," as translated to the screen by Nunnally Johnson, in all save the form of expression of an identical purpose. Whereas the Steinbeck play achieves its drama in terms of psychological development, "Darkness" attains its climaxes in tumultuous physical action. In both the Nazis have overrun Norway and oppressed its peaceful people. In "Edge of Darkness" the consequences of their folly are revealed at the very beginning in a grim and gruesome scene. The action then reverts and picks up the events leading to that scene of carnage. Those events will keep you on the edge of your chair.

Although Errol Flynn and Ann Sheridan are the ostensible stars, their performances are matched, or better, by numerous others in the cast, including Helmut Dantine, as the Nazi commander; Walter Huston, Ruth Jordan, Judith Anderson, Roman Bohnen, Morris Carnovsky, Nancy Coleman and John Beal.

The stage revue is held over with the screen feature, and an exceedingly engaging stage revue it is.

Metropolitan

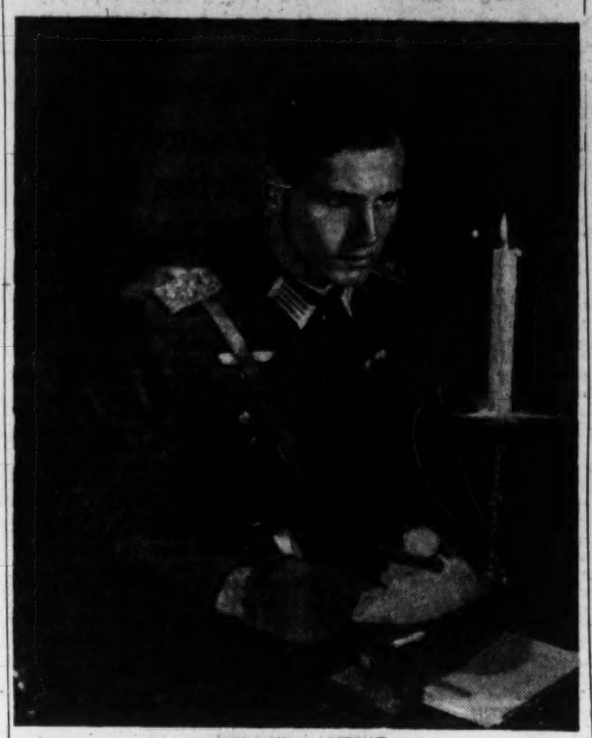

That odd cinematic blending of comedy and tragedy known as "The Hard Way," yesterday renewed its downtown run on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater.

This one also introduces itself with a scene of tragic starkness. An attractive young woman attempts to end it all by plunging into the river, only to be fished out by the police and later interrogated as to her motive and who she is, on her deathbed. The disclosure of who she is and why she did it form the variegated story that is then revealed upon the screen.

The victim of her own desperation is the elder sister of a gifted girl whom she determines to see become a great star of the theater. How she maneuvers to that end is related in an odd combination of the glamour, music and fun of show business and a Lady Macbethan willingness to make the end justify any means necessary to its accomplishment. That includes a life of greater duplicity and ruthlessness than most can manage.

With Ida Lupino in this dominant role and Joan Leslie as the younger sister, the play takes on proportions far beyond those indicated by any brief outline. It is abundantly rich in entertainment, in a remarkable variety of forms. This is generously contributed to by Dennis Morgan, whose voice is heard for the first time in song; Jack Carson, Roman Bohnen, Thurston Hall, Paul Cavanagh, Gladys George and a long list of others.

Disillusionment Overtakes 'Master Race'

HELMUT DANTINE

who captures the acting honors in the Warner Brothers' production of "Edge of Darkness," as Capt. Hauptman Koenig, whose delusions of invincibility crumble before the spirit of free men in this thrilling story of Norway under the heel of Nazi tyranny. The picture is continuing a second week at the Earle, with Errol Flynn and Ann Sheridan starred, and Walter Huston, Ruth Gordon, Judith Anderson, Roman Bohnen, Morris Carnovsky and scores more in roles of prime importance

HEDDA HOPPER

Her Sights Set High!

Hollywood, April 30.—Claudette Colbert got out of her war picture at R.K.O. She's looking for another "It Happened One Night."

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

She's got a good one in "No Time for Love," but studio's holding it back until after "So Proudly We Hail" is released. Don't know why war films are being shoved out and comedies held back when everybody's screaming for comedies. "The Constant Nymph," with Charles Boyer and Joan Fontaine, won't be released until January, 1944. Yet it was finished a year and a half ago. Incidentally, Joan and Brian Aherne spent Easter in Mexico City. . . . Luscious Lucia Carroll (Mrs. Carl Schroeder) added to "Saratoga Trunk," by Sam Wood. . . . When Kenny Baker was asked what his parents wanted him to become when he grew up, he replied, "self-supporting!" . . . Bette Davis' Easter present from her husband was a gold lapel watch shaped like a hat, with a diamond bunny sitting on top of it.

Perfect Medicine

Edward Everett Horton interrupted his Eastern tour of "Springtime for Henry" to play Charlotte Greenwood's husband in "The Girls wounded in hospitals. Knew boys would like to see pretty girls, so took the two from his show, streamlined the whole play, and has a letter from head doctor saying, "Your medicine was better than mine. I saw boys laugh I never thought would laugh again." . . . Liza Wilson trains out for New York and after attending to business there goes down to visit Liz Whitney in Virginia for a nervous breakdown.

Mum on Visit

Sam Goldwyn back from a few days' visit in New York and Washington, after the Spanish War, for his collection. Don's sending them back, via the U. S. Army, and not a a collection . . . "Paris, Tennessee" has quite a cast lined up, what with Ida Lupino, Dana Andrews, Maureen O'Hara, and Anne Baxter . . . Jimmy Hilton's signed to write on "The Time Between," which is fast becoming a best-seller story of a 10-day leave and decidedly an adult comedy.

He Left Behind.

Eddie's been playing Henry for 10 years, breaking records. Everywhere in Philadelphia he was asked to entertain ington, and for the first time since I've known him, won't talk about plans which took him East. But he put on a rave about Billy Menzies' and Lewis Milestone's work in "The North Star." . . . Test Pilot Corpl. Ben S. Kelsey bailed out over the motion picture relief fund home, was picked up with a broken leg, his head buried in a swamp, and cared for in their hospital. Few days later the home received a check for $100 from Cyril Chappellet, Lockheed's vice president, in deep appreciation . . . Ward Bond, the John L. Sullivan of "Gentleman Jim," has gone softie. He'll play the harmonica while Irene Dunne sings "I'll Get By" in "A Guy Named Joe."

Old Order Changeth

B. W. (Before War) Harry Sherman would have cast all stars in "Buffalo Bill." Now he's frantically looking for character men to play General Custer, Wild Bill Hickok, and Pawnee Bill, and be shot in Technicolor . . . Since Capt. John Huston dined with Simone Simon, Olivia De Havilland is frantically trying to make up with him . . . Comm. Gene Markey tells tales of marines on Guadalcanal. One from Brooklyn with a sense of humor called himself "Sergt. Robinson Crusoe," rigged himself up a little souvenir shack. He'd go out on his own at night, bring back Japanese swords, knives, teeth, or anything his buddies asked for, and for good luck, a couple of pineapples for the topkick!

They've Got Rhythm

Eddie Goulding and Elsie Janis put their heads together. Result was the song "Love, Your Magic Spell." Now they're working over one called "Claudia," which Eddie hopes will be good enough for the picture . . . Woody Herman didn't have a teacher when he took to skates in "Winter Time." Back in Milwaukee, where he hails from, skating is as natural as hiking . . . Phil Baker overheard two chorus girls: "Isn't it wonderful?" said one, "Janice got $10,000 for her memoirs, and the book won't even be published." Why not?" "Because it's all about her publisher!"

A Real "Session"

Louis Armstrong and his band will be in "Jam Session." Stepin Fetchit is also being brought out, and his manager says he'll be the best behaved man in Hollywood. But does Fetchit know it? . . . Don Wilson's Dad, Capt. Lincoln Wilson, brought back a dozen fancy knives and daggers from Tokio and Manila,

Times Square Tattle

New York, April 30.

In one of the midtown restaurants the other night three ladies waited half an hour for a table. The proprietor apologized for the delay, and said that as soon as some diners left, the ladies would get the table . . . "I see three empty tables over there," one lady told him. "Why can't we sit there?" . . . "Those are marked 'Reserved,' " the proprietor told her . . . "But isn't it rather late, to hold a reservation?" the lady persisted . . . "I'll be frank with you," the proprietor confessed. "They aren't reserved. I keep those signs there because of the labor shortage. I can't get enough help."

HARRY LAUDER

Myrna Loy is in Washington this week. She may leave there with an important war job . . . George Biddle, the artist, is leaving for one of the fronts, to paint battle scenes for the Army . . . The printing for Wendell Willkie's "One World" has passed the 750,000 mark . . . Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls" will be shown at the Rivoli, starting July 8. It will be a two-a-day, at $2.20 tops . . . Some of America's best known artists are painting a complete pictorial record of the U. S. Navy's activities in this war. They're working at Lakehurst, Pensacola and other bases. The project is sponsored by a private pharmaceutical company.

An investigator went to the office of Mike Kennedy, leader of Tammany Hall, and questioned him about a former employe who had applied for a commission in the Army. Kennedy had discharged that employe . . . "Do you remember the day he left you?" the investigator asked . . . "Do I?" answered Kennedy. "Do you remember Pearl Harbor?" . . . "Does he drink at all?" the investigator continued. "No," Kennedy replied. "But he should."

Three war bond salesmen suddenly decided to visit the Village Barn, and there made a four-minute plea. They came away with checks and subscriptions for one million dollars . . . Ensign Barrett Gallagher, the noted Manhattan photographer, who was in charge of a gun-crew aboard a torpedoed merchantman and who was rescued after a day in a lifeboat, doesn't wear a star on his campaign ribbon—because the Navy doesn't regard this as "a recognized engagement." . . . The William Morris theatrical agency is trying to induce Sir Harry Lauder, who still is one of its clients, to make one last visit to America.

Doc Marcus, the magician, is telling of Rainbow, a veteran vaudeville horse who realized that he was aging rapidly. He found a young horse named Belmont and taught him all the vaudeville tricks he had learned. Belmont quickly became a star . . . Years later, Rainbow was pulling a milk wagon up Broadway and noticed Belmont's name in lights on a theater marquee. He waited at the stage door until his former protege emerged and they greeted each other. "I'm doing fine," Belmont reported. "I've got a lot of bookings, making a lot of dough. But what's with you, Rainbow? What's with you and that milk wagon? Such a smart horse, pulling a milk wagon?" . . . "Oh, well," sighed Rainbow, "you know, that darn William Morris office."

"As to the story you ran a few days back, in regard to Sinclair Lewis and myself," writes Jim Tully, "here is what really happened. There were three of us at Lewis' house. I drank overmuch, and got maudlin, and then laughed. So did the others. So Lewis ordered us out of his house. Well, it was rather late, and the bootleggers had all gone home, so we talked things over. Going to Lewis, we told him that it would look bad if we obeyed him—that America's greatest satirist should have more humor—and that to protect him from such a story becoming public we would not leave the house. So to get rid of us he went to bed."

Backstage at the Ziegfeld Follies some of the crew reminisced of Ziegfeld, of his gambling and of his superstition. One of them told of the day when Ziegfeld rode high in Monte Carlo, where, in the gambling casino, many stopped to watch him play. King Edward entered the room, sat next to Ziegfeld, put his foot on the rung of the producer's chair, and asked: "Do you mind if I watch?" . . . Not at all, your Majesty," said Ziegfeld, who then proceeded to lose over $40,000. Not once did he ask the King to remove his foot from the player's chair—a kibitzer's position which all gamblers interpret as a sign of bad luck.

Stricter Sunday Observance Urged by Presbyterian Group

DR. JAMES H. TAYLOR, member of special committee for coming Southern Persbyterian parley

A stricter attitude toward the Lord's Day observance is being urged of clergymen and laymen in a report of the Permanent Committee on the Sabbath of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (Southern), whose 83rd assembly will meet May 27 to June 2 at Montreat, N. C.

Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, Fifteenth and Irving Streets Northwest, where President Wilson worshipped, is a member of the special committee, whose pre-assembly statement reads:

"Despite the earnest efforts of ministers, church officers and people to stir the church to some worthwhile action in regard to the neglect and desecration of the Lord's Day, there apparently prevails a pacific attitude and lack of militant concern on the part of our ministers, elders, deacons and members toward the increasing disregard and violation of the Sabbath Day."

The committee asks the assembly to recommend that the pastors of all Presbyterian (Southern) Churches preach more frequently and positively upon the Fourth Commandment.

"Disregard and violation of the Fourth Commandment are more extensive and more flagrant today than they ever have been in the history of our country," the report states. It further points out that "such transgression of the law pertaining to the observance of the Sabbath tends toward profaneness, apostacy and atheism."

The committee draws attention to the laguage and meaning of the Fourth Commandment, stating that they "are simple, perfectly plain and understandable," and asks that the church "critically examine our own conduct in respect to Sabbath observance."

The Rev. S. C. Byrd, D. D., Charlotte, N. C., president emiritus of Queen's College, is chairman of the committee. The Rev. John L. Fairly, D. D., Richmond, also is a member.

Every neighborhood in Metropolitan Washington should have a vacation program for its children this summer."

— — AMBROSE — —

We praise Thee, O God!
We acknowledge Thee to be the Lord;
All the Earth doth worship Thee, the Father Everlasting.
To Thee all the angels cry aloud: the heavens and all the powers therein.
To Thee cherubim and seraphim continually do cry,
"Holy, holy, holy Lord God of Sabaoth; Heaven and Earth are full of the majesty of Thy glory!"

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Poetic tradition divides the honor for its composition between Ambrose and his convert, Augustine. Ambrose lifted his hands to heaven and chanted the first lines in a holy rapture. Augustine responded, and so stave by stave in alternating strains, sprang this standard hymn of Christian praise.

Lutherans To Open Fund Campaign

Lutherans of the Washington area will convene for a mass meeting at Grace Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Varnum Streets Northwest, on Thursday evening to open a local campaign coinciding with a similar one throughout the Lutheran Churches of America to raise a million dollars by May 23 for Lutheran World Action.

DR. LONG

Dr. Ralph H. Long, executive director of the National Lutheran Council, New York City, the central agency for Lutheran Action throughout the world, will be the principal speaker. He is directing the million dollar appeal among the American Lutherans.

The Rev. Orville Lueck, Baltimore, defense area chaplain for the Baltimore area under the sponsorship of Lutheran World Action, will also speak and show films of the work of establishing temporary congregations in the defense areas.

The Lutheran World Action, now in its fourth annual campaign, is at the present time sponsoring Lutheran Service Centers with special servicemen's pastors in many Army and naval training areas throughout the country. Through the response expected to this campaign, it is hoped to establish over 100 additional centers. The service centers are usually located in the community closest to the Army or naval camp. Recreational and chapel facilities are provided.

The Rev. L. Ralph Tabor, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church here, is national director for Lutheran World Action in the United Lutheran Church of America.

Anti-Franco Veteran Sent to Medics

HERE ARE more illustrations of how the brass hats in the U. S. Army are treating American boys who went to fight for a republican government in Spain against Dictator Franco and his supporters, Mussolini and Hitler.

The German and Italian armies used the Spanish civil war as a testing ground for modern warfare; but the U. S. Army has relegated Americans who fought in Spain largely to work battalions.

Milton Wolff was a major in command of a battalion of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade in the Ebro offensive. Later he enlisted in the U. S. Army, was sent to officers' training camp at Fort Benning, Ga. There regimental commander Col. Thomas R. Gibson treated Wolff cordially and a story of his Spanish experiences was written up in the camp newspaper. His qualifications were rated "excellent." He qualified on map reading, compass work, night problems.

Queried About Spain

"Then," says Wolff, "suddenly the ax fell. It was certainly not routine procedure for flunking men out. I was supposed to see a regimental board, which is routine; but after hanging around all day, I was called in to see a colonel. He asked me about Spain, the labor movement, Brookwood School—straight stuff. I gave him straight answers.

"Knowing something was funny I went to see my company commander and asked him what the score was. He said he didn't know. Subsequently my battalion commander, regimental commander, and the Infantry School commander told me the same thing.

"This was about a week and a half before graduation. The last of the men to be flunked out had already left. I completed the course, which ended four days before graduation. The last few days are used for signing final forms, uniforms, graduation rehearsals.

"Then I knew something phoney was going to happen. I signed none of the final forms. Again I went up the chain of command and got the same replies. They didn't know.

"Finally I was shipped to Fort McClellan, Ala., and was assigned to the Medics (Medical Corps). I will probably be here for the duration, despite the fact that a War Department order says that only 1B men would fill these services."

Meanwhile, War and Navy Departments desk jobs in Washington are crowded with blueboods from the Social Register who never saw a rifle, but had no trouble getting cellophane commissions — you can see through them but they protect from the draft.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Pup

Here's one of Mrs. Roosevelt's stories which she tells on herself:

In London it is customary for the English police to give a code" name or pseudonym to every distinguished visitor which can be used by radio police cars, without the Nazis picking up the name from the ether waves and knowing who is in London.

So when Mrs. Roosevelt arrived, Scotland Yard suggested that she adopt a code name, since her presence in London was still a secret. With typical Rooseveltian humor she chose the code name "Rover."

One of the first things Mrs. Roosevelt wanted was to visit her son Elliott. So she started to his office in an Army car, equipped with a two-way radio. While driving there, the car's radio informed the First Lady that Elliott, not knowing of her arrival, had left his office.

Mrs. Roosevelt didn't know where to find him. Finally she suggested that a message be broadcast by radio from the car that she was looking for Elliott. However, to use the name "Elliott Roosevelt" on the radio would immediately tip off the Nazis regarding his whereabouts, would also give a hint that she was in London.

So Mrs. Roosevelt proposed a code message.

"Let's broadcast this," she said: "'Rover has lost her pup.'"

No Sympathy for Silver

Secretary Morgenthau gave no encouragement to the silver bloc in discussing his postwar plan for stabilizing world currency through a five-billion-dollar stabilization fund.

When discussing this world stabilization plan with members of the House Foreign Affairs and Coinage committees, Morgenthau was asked:

"Have you given any consideration to using silver as a partial reserve for the five-billion-dollar fund?"

"We have given silver all the consideration it is entitled to," replied the Secretary of the Treasury with crisp emphasis. "However, we decided against it for reasons too generally known to be repeated here. Silver is a subsidiary metal and it would greatly complicate our plans to use it in addition to gold."

Red-Baiters

Alexis Leger, one-time liberal French Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, now a refugee in Washington, has been lecturing U. S. diplomats regarding the menace of Russia after the war.

At a recent dinner, Leger gave such a forceful warning that Russia would dominate Europe after the war that one red-worried U. S. diplomat went back to the State Department and wrote an inter-office memo to his colleagues cautioning against an overwhelming Russian victory.

Author of these sermons which tend to divide the United States from one of its chief allies is on Uncle Sam's payroll. Leger was given a job in the Library of Congress shortly after he fled here from France.

Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"Much more comfortable in these things since rationing started, don't you think?"

Eye for an Eye

John G. Winant, U. S. Ambassador to Great Britain, thinks we can fight this war without hating the enemy. In fact, he thinks we can fight it better without hating the enemy.

Winant is impressed by the fact that the British tried a "hate campaign," then abandoned it. One of the voices expressing strongest opposition to the campaign was the commanding general of the British forces in England, Gen. Bernard C. T. Paget.

Winant believes—together with the recent Archbishp of Canterbury, Dr. Cosmo Lang, who made this point in a public address—that there is a clear difference between revenge and retribution. One is an act of returning evil for evil, the other is punishment for evil.

According to this view, a man can be a better soldier if he has an exalted notion of his cause, rather than a mere hatred of the enemy.

Lighted Cigarette In Blackout Costs Raid Warden $10

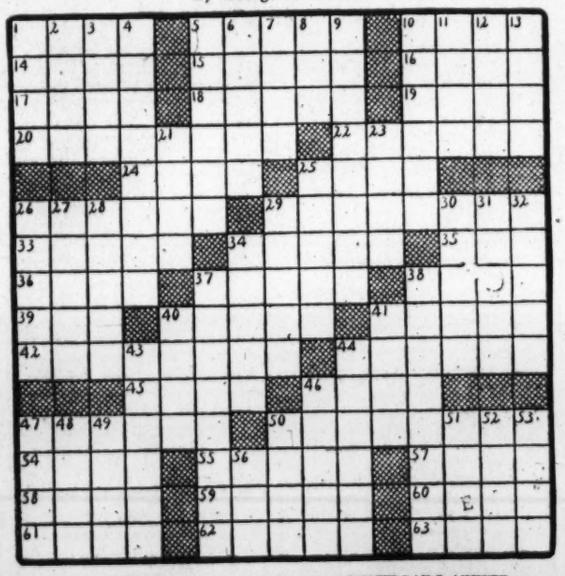

Leroy Ingram, 33, Negro, air raid warden, of 112 Eighth Street Northwest, was fined $10 in Municipal Court yesterday for carrying a lighted cigarette during the blackout Wednesday night.

Police said they observed Ingram, equipped with all the warden's designations, leaving a drug store in the 110 0block of Seventeenth Street Northwest with the lighted cigarette.

Ingram old Judge Walter Casey that he worked in the drugstore, and absentmindedly kept the cigarette in his hand as he went to pursue his warden's duties upon hearing the alarm.
